MAJOR BATTLE BELIEVED JOINED AS VAST REINFORCEMENTS REACH INVADERS

Incessant Aerial Blows Being Rained On Germans

More Than 13,000 Sorties Flown By AEF On First Invasion Day

LONDON, June 7—Incessant aerial blows were carried out today by fleets of Allied airplanes in support of Allied ground forces driving inland from the French coast after more than 1,000 heavy Royal Air Force bombers blasted German communications behind the battlefield during the night.

The air ministry said that the great forces of bomber command planes which went out during the night concentrated their main attack against road and railroads behind the beachheads established by American, British and Canadian troops.

The German Rhineland chemical center of Ludwigshafen was attacked by other RAF bombers. Planes of the bomber command also mined Nazi-controlled waters. The RAF operations were carried out without loss.

The heavy British night bombers got in the last blows at the end of D-day by cascading mighty loads of bombs on the German communications.

Roads, railroad bridges and junctions were attacked at various critical points, the air ministry said.

Balk Reinforcement

All of the attacks, each of which was made with a strong force, were designed to block and delay reinforcements which the enemy was expected to bring up by every possible means of transport.

Some of the RAF crews, the communiqué said, dropped down to altitudes of only 2,000 feet to insure pin-point attacks on their targets.

The crews were able to view the ground scenes clearly, including fires and star shells which indicated fighting was in progress below them.

Jungle Fighters Converge On Airfields And Near Dominant Heights

GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, June 7—American infantrymen, supported by four-motored bombers of the Fifth Air Force, smashed their way steadily today toward the three Japanese airfields on Biak island, closely approaching the cliffs dominating the bases.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme commander in the Southwest Pacific, announced that several columns of his jungle fighters converged "in wide development" on the fields and already were near the dominant heights. The forward drive on the Dutch New Guinea island was aided by the huge American warplanes which successfully bombed Japanese gun emplacements and other installations in the rear of the enemy defense lines.

When 10 Japanese fighter planes attempted to interfere with the American advance, they were met by fierce anti-aircraft fire which destroyed one and probably three others before forcing the others to flee. Another enemy plane was shot down in two other ineffective raids on U. S. positions. Farther to the East, other units of MacArthur's Sixth Army forces repulsed "several abortive enemy counter-attacks," slaying an additional 107 Japanese troops in the Sarmi-Maffin bay sector. MOSCOW RADIO HAILS INVASION OF FRANCE

NEW YORK, June 7—The Moscow radio, hailing the Anglo-American invasion of France as "of the greatest political and moral significance," declared today that it made the Axis and their satellites "realize the hour of reckoning is approaching."

The broadcast, reported by the FCC, added that those downtrodden peoples under the Nazi heel regard the Allied landings "as the final step in their liberations."

Three Weak Spots In Political Armor Of Allies Cause Worry

WASHINGTON, June 7—As the military phase of the liberation of Europe proceeded, diplomats expressed apprehension today over three weak spots in the political armor of the Allies which to a degree threatened the success of the military operations.

These weak spots were identified as the unsettled political situations in Poland, France, and Yugoslavia.

In the wake of the series of rousing statements made yesterday in all quarters of Washington, diplomats today warned that these three countries contained the seeds of serious trouble, quite apart from the works of the enemy.

The situation was summed up briefly as follows:

1. The Polish and Soviet governments still are not on speaking terms. Efforts to patch their quarrel in London have failed. Belated efforts began in Washington only this week with the arrival of the Polish prime minister.
2. Gen. Charles De Gaulle and his French National Committee have been rebuffed in their effort to get full recognition as a government, and to get an agreement

FRENCH MILITIA CALLED TO ARMS ON HUN ORDER

LONDON, June 7—Joseph Darnand, minister of "public security" for the Nazi-controlled Vichy government, issued a call to arms to the militia of occupied France, the Vichy radio said today.

Darnand's mobilization order came on the heels of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain's plea to the people of the occupied nation to remain calm and obey the Vichy government during the Allied invasion. The marshal beseeched his people to refrain from acts that might bring tragic consequences.

"A storm of fire and steel has descended on Normandy and Joseph Darnand calls on you to take up arms and assemble under the leadership of your chiefs," the controlled radio broadcast said, in announcing the mobilization order.

"If Frenchmen do not follow the advice given today by Marshal Petain then it will be your duty to enforce his desires."

"Be on your toes for the coming events and do not desert your units."

STIMSON ASKS PAY BOOST FOR GOOD FIGHTERS

WASHINGTON, June 7—Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson appealed to congress today for a ten dollar boost in pay for "combat doughboys" in the infantry awarded badges for "military excellence."

Stimson asked for the pay increase in a letter to House Speaker Rayburn which stated that the initial cost of the proposed legislation would be fifty-five million dollars, rising to a maximum of seventy-one million dollars annually as more men qualify for the combat badge.

At the same time Stimson put in a request for five more dollars per month for infantrymen sporting the "expert infantryman badge" which is awarded for satisfactory duty in action against the enemy.

The war secretary said the proposal to hike only the specified infantryman's pay is an "incentive measure."

He contended an over-all flat increase of pay would have only a temporary effect as an incentive. He said the proposed pay raise is not intended as money compensation for "hazards and hardships," adding "such things cannot be paid for in money."

AIR BASES IN FRANCE IS AIM

Extensive Preparations Made For New Bases To Hammer Hitler

LONDON, June 7—Extensive preparations for American and British air assaults against Adolf Hitler's Europe from bases on the soil of his occupied continent were revealed by the British radio today.

Broadcasts beamed from London throughout the United Kingdom and to Europe told of Allied supply planes carrying airplane fuel to the newly-established beachheads in Northern France.

(Information at supreme Allied headquarters said that Allied planes "probably" are depositing high octane airplane fuel in France for possible later use and that ground preparatory crews went in as part of the invasion force.)

Other radio messages told of Allied engineering troops landed in France soon after the first invasion forces building airstrips in various areas for early Allied use.

(A broadcast from London heard in New York said that Allied "Bulldozers" already are at work "carving out the first Royal Air Force airfield on the coast of France.")

The British radio described Allied planes carrying fuel and other supplies to the newly-established invasion areas as "beach squadrons" and indicated these

CHURCHILL BALKED IN INVASION FRONT ROLE

ABOARD H. M. S. HILARY, June 7—Prime Minister Winston Churchill was persuaded "only with the greatest difficulty" from accompanying Allied invasion forces to the French coast, Admiral Sir Bertram Home Ramsay revealed today.

The commander of Allied naval forces disclosed Churchill's desire to accompany the landing troops when he visited this vessel. Churchill finally was convinced that the extra work involved in guarding him would place an unwarranted burden on the Allied navies.

Fifth Army Fans Out North Of Rome After Crushing Slight Resistance

NAPLES, June 7—Troops of the Allied Fifth Army in Italy fanned out 10 miles above Rome today after overcoming slight German resistance.

Patrols operating west of the liberated Italian capital reached a point only four miles from the Tyrrhenian sea coast.

Infantry forces streaking north-west of Rome drove to within five miles of Lake Bracciano, about 15 miles from the capital. An increasing bag of German prisoners was counted, with the total now set at more than 18,000.

The Eighth Army operating east of Rome met greater resistance than the Fifth Army forces, but continued to push northward through the mountains. They captured Balsorano, in the Liri river valley.

Fighter-bombers of the Mediterranean Air Forces kept up constant attacks against the Germans retreating north of Rome. They tore craters into escape roadways and shot up scores of Nazi vehicles.

A German ammunition dump at the strategic road junction of Terni was hit.

Night bombers attacked both Orvieto and Viterbo, key escape points for the fleeing Nazi forces. (Radio Algiers reported that units of the Fifth Army are racing forward along highway two in the direction of Florence.)

("They have reached the Tiber along its entire length from Rome to the sea and crossed it at numerous points," the French transmitter said.)

The Fifth Army forces under command of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark moved up well beyond Rome in an effort to maintain contact with fleeing Nazis who were constantly harassed by Allied forces.

TED DEFINITELY TO BE HERE FOR PARK OPENING

Ted Lewis definitely will be in Circleville next Monday evening for the formal opening of Ted Lewis park. "I'll be there for sure," the world famous musician told Mayor Gordon during a telephone conversation. "I don't want to know anything about the program or park improvements now. I want to be surprised," Ted declared.

And Ted Lewis undoubtedly will be surprised, for the park now is looking like a park for the first time. The program Monday evening will start with a parade and close with a softball game between the Circleville Jaycees and the Kahn girls' team from Columbus.

Airmen Report Fiercest Fighting Appears To Be In Progress In Bayeux Area Between Le Havre and Cherbourg

BULLETIN

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 7—Every beachhead along the northern coast of France on which Allied troops have landed in the invasion of Europe has now been cleared of German forces, the headquarters of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower made known today.

At the same time it was learned that the Allied bridgehead in the interior of French Normandy has been cleared to a depth of from 5 to 6 miles along a semicircle from Valognes in the Cherbourg peninsula to Trouville at the intersection of the Seine.

Some of the Allied beachheads now are linked up with those flanking them, the spokesman for Gen. Eisenhower said, and progress of the invasion "is cause for sober satisfaction."

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, June 7—Mounting indications that a major battle has been joined in Northern France reached England from across the beleaguered channel today and vast reinforcements were thrown in by land and sea to support Allied beachheads and interior invasion areas.

Headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, announcing that "progress" was made throughout yesterday in fulfillment of the master plan of liberating Europe, said that "heavy fighting" was under way in some areas.

Dispatch of air-borne reinforcements was resumed successfully during the night despite unfavorable channel weather, Gen. Eisenhower's third communiqué said.

With the mammoth Allied assault against Adolf Hitler's Europe some 36 hours under way, this was the general picture presented:

1—The German high command claimed that Allied invasion units had come into contact with Nazi "tactical reserves," precipitating a major encounter in the vicinity of Bayeux, midway between Le Havre and Cherbourg, some 20 miles northwest of Caen.

2—For the second day in succession, German naval opposition to Allied landings was negligible, although Nazi air force activity increased.

3—Some German coastal artillery defenses are still in operation despite pulverizing Allied air and sea attack but these are now under renewed fire.

4—Field Marshal Karl Rudolph Gerd Von Rundstedt, supreme commander of German anti-invasion forces throughout Europe, issued his first communiqué. In it he said that Allied forces had made contact with German reserves, a contingency that Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters had predicted would lead to heavy fighting.

5—Weather over the Straits of Dover and the English channel continued generally unfavorable, but some improvement was noted, with high cloud banks affording aerial cover.

6—Coincident with Von Rundstedt's announcement of a major engagement in the Bayeux sector, German broadcasts reported a new amphibious landing "attempt" across the Straits of Dover—the narrowest section of the English channel between Great Britain and France. The channel here is only 21 miles wide.

BULLETIN

HEADQUARTERS OF THE U. S. NINTH AIR FORCE TACTICAL COMMAND, June 7—The Allied beachhead in Northern France, stretching more than 60 miles from Valognes on the Cherbourg peninsula to Trouville on the Seine estuary, has pushed inland a distance of from five to six miles, fliers stationed at this American fighter base disclosed today.

pears to be in progress in the Bayeux area of Northern France. This town is close to the channel coast on Seine bay about midway between Le Havre and Cherbourg.

The Allies, these fliers said, are making every effort to drive inland and the air forces are "co-operating tremendously" to liquidate enemy defenses.

"Very heavy fighting" has been experienced by Allied troops combating the Germans in some parts of Northern France, official information said.

This apparently applied to airborne landing places in the interior as well as on the beachheads.

A spokesman used the term "very heavy fighting" in applications to "certain beachheads."

By midday yesterday, however, at least some of the areas concerned were "freed of direct German fire," probably by Allied air attack or naval bombardment.

No Naval Casualties

Although no naval casualties were suffered in the initial invasion thrusts, headquarters disclosed, some small craft were swamped.

This was due to unfavorable weather which "left considerable to be desired" in furtherance of the initial Allied success. Weather conditions were officially regarded as "better" this morning, with higher clouds aiding air support.

At 11 a. m. British time, however, there was a blustering wind over the Straits of Dover and occasional storm gusts, with waves in mid-channel about three feet high.

Conditions in the channel, however, had little or no effect upon myriads of Allied bombing, fighter and supply planes which swept over and back in shuttle attack throughout the day to bolster the invasion front and deal punishing new blows to Nazi defenses in France and Germany.

Although most of the enemy coastal batteries in the invasion area were stunned by preliminary Allied bombardment, some were not entirely obliterated, headquarters revealed, and since have come into action again.

Air and naval forces are now engaged in subjecting them.

The feeling at headquarters was that at the moment neither optimism nor pessimism can be expressed over the present stage of operations. The weather in general is still unfavorable, with improvements only slight.

The general attitude at headquarters was summed up by a spokesman who said that operations still were going according to plan, with the enemy not yet showing his hand fully and presumably loath to move up his reserves until he has more definite information. Bitter fighting then may be expected, it was said.

Communique No. 3 from the supreme headquarters of Allied armies which already have penetrated the main and secondary German defense lines in successful initiation of the greatest offensive in history said:

"Allied forces continued landings on the northern coast of France throughout yesterday and satisfactory progress was made.

"Rangers and Commandos formed part of the assaulting forces.

"No further attempt at interference with our seaborne landings was made by enemy naval forces.

"Those coastal batteries still in operation are being bombarded by Allied warships.

"At twilight yesterday and for the fourth time during the day our heavy bombers attacked railway communications and bridges in the general battle area.

"There was increased air opposition and 26 enemy aircraft which attempted to interfere were shot down.

"One Allied bomber and 17 fighters failed to return from this operation.

"Other enemy air activity included an attack on our beach forces.

"This proved abortive and four of a formation of 12 Junkers 88's were destroyed.

"In addition to attacks on defended positions and other objectives in immediate support of land operations, railway centers, bridges, military buildings and communications at Abancourt, Serquez, Amiens and Vire were attacked repeatedly throughout yesterday by our medium and light bombers.

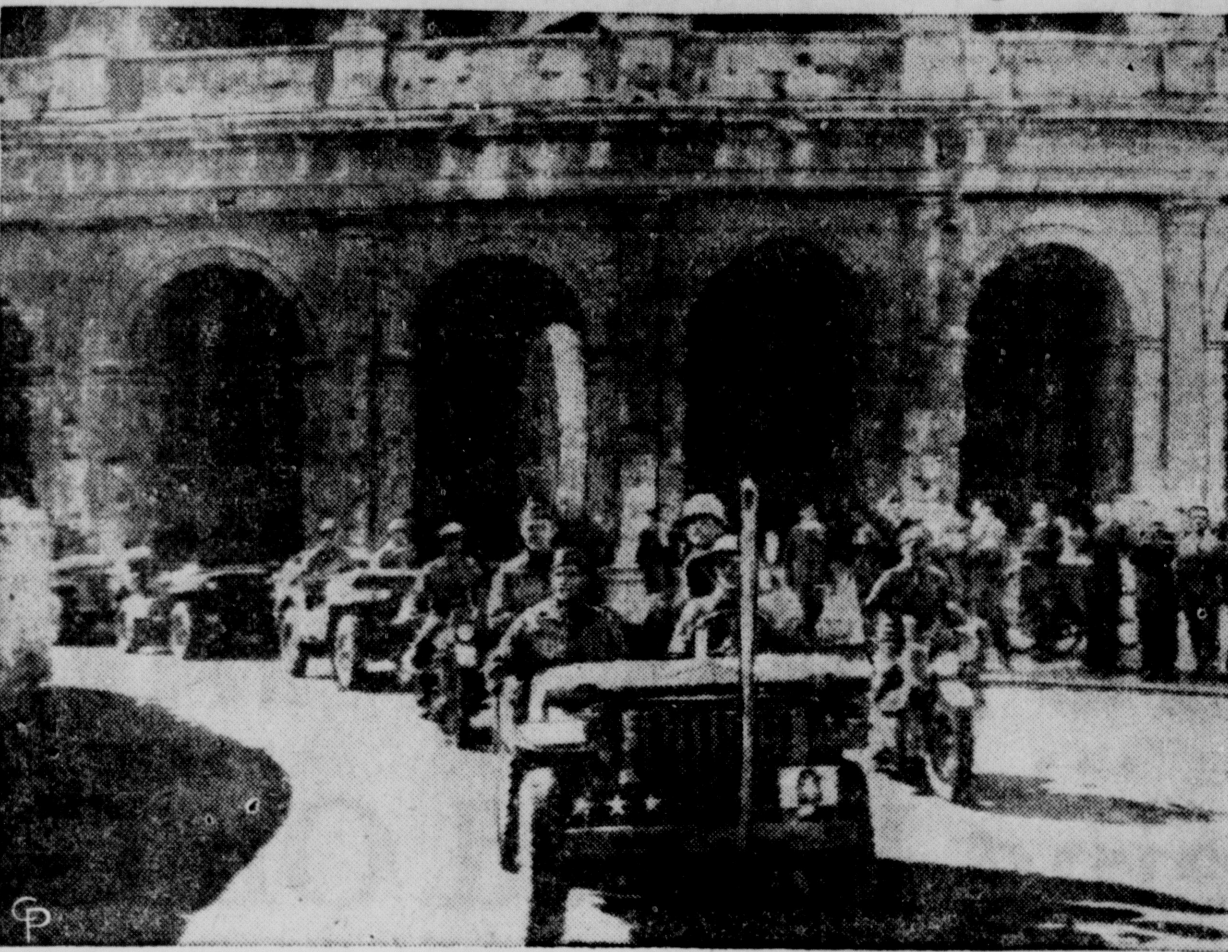

"Allied fighter-bombers and fighters flew low to attack enemy units and motor truck columns.

"From dawn until dusk a vast Allied fighter force maintained vigil over our shipping and over the assault area. This air cover was again completely successful.

"Air-borne operations were resumed successfully last night.

"Coastal aircraft attacked Ger-

regarding civil government of France.

3. Civil war rages in Yugoslavia between the Partisans and the Chetniks, preventing a solid front against Germany. Churchill has accused the Mihailovich forces of collaborating with the enemy, to which Mihailovich responds that "both the Allied and enemy propaganda are working to disrupt our military organizations."

All three of these political disorders were described as threatening immediate military operations.

The Polish distrust of the Soviets lies like a crater in the path of Soviet armies, about to advance through Poland against Germany.

Anglo-American distrust of De Gaulle threatens to impair French underground support of the invasion forces.

And civil war in Yugoslavia may prevent the desired junction of Allied forces in Rome with Yugoslav forces on the other side of the Adriatic.

MRS. ERCELL WRIGHT DIES AT NEW HOLLAND HOME

Mrs. Ercell Wright, 53, died at her home in New Holland, Tuesday. She was a past worthy matron of the New Holland Eastern Star chapter and was also active in school and church work until her health forced her to retire from these activities about a year ago.

Surviving are her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Irene Sorensen of New Jersey, and Mrs. Jean Bush, New Holland; a son, Harold Wright, of New Holland; her father, David Steinhauer, Clarksburg; a sister, Mrs. S. E. Bottenfield, Washington, C. H. and a brother, Ralph Steinhauer, Bournville.

BULLETIN

LONDON, June 7—German broadcasts today reported a new Allied amphibious landing attempt across the Straits of Dover.

Between Dover and Calais on the northeastern coast of France the distance is only 21 miles.

Supreme headquarters of the Allied expeditionary force had no comment to make on the German claims of a landing attempt in the Calais area.

BULLETIN

LONDON, June 7—The German-controlled Paris radio reported today that a huge Allied armada comprising some 6,000 vessels, including heavy cruisers as escort and a swarm of landing vessels of all types, is now cruising off the Cherbourg peninsula.

"The naval guns of this fleet are engaged in artillery duels with the German shore batteries," Paris said.

MITCHELL FUNERAL

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in the Kirkpatrick funeral home, New Holland for William J. Mitchell, 74, a prominent New Holland citizen and philanthropist, who died in University hospital, Columbus, Monday of a heart attack, a few minutes after being admitted to the hospital. He had been ill for about two months. Never having married, he spent his entire life in and around New Holland where he was at one time a section hand on the railroad, a carpenter and a blacksmith. He has aided many young persons of the community to secure homes by assisting them financially.

His only relatives are two nieces, Mrs. Leslie Clark, Columbus and Mrs. Grace Timmons, Dayton.

channel, the British plane crews watched the constant shuttle of ships to and from the beachheads.

Supreme headquarters of the Allied expeditionary air force revealed that from dawn to dusk yesterday Allied air forces flew 13,000 sorties. The American Eighth Air Force flew 4,300 of these sorties and the Ninth Air Force flew 4,800.

Little Opposition

Crews at an advanced second tactical air force base who participated in night operations said they met practically no German air force resistance and encountered only sporadic anti-aircraft fire.

A road bridge crossing the river Dives, near Croissanville, was effectively bombed from low altitude.

Another squadron hammered the important road junction of Falaise. Still another attacked the road and railroad bridge in the Caumonts defile south of Harcourt.

Lisieux was left well alight after an attack and numerous fires burned all over Normandy.

It was estimated that the bomb weight dropped by the great Allied aerial armadas throughout "D-Day" operations and before today's daylight sorties began totaled 22,500 tons.

Vast fleets went out shortly after 7 a. m. after a night of tremendous air activity which died down only at dawn.

The skies over the channel were cheerless as the daylight squadrons put out from England and there were huge banks of clouds.

Bombers Active

Royal Air Force heavy bombers, understood to number more than 1,000, took part in the night operations against occupied territory, blasting and burning German military objectives on and near the Normandy coast where Americans, Britons and Canadians are battling their way inland.

The RAF was understood to have provided non-stop air cover over the Normandy beaches throughout the night. The British planes met very little night fighter opposition.

ried aerial assaults which smashed their transport columns.

Principal resistance was encountered by Eighth Army forces in the mountainous regions considerably east of Rome. Only weak resistance was met west of Rome beyond the Tiber where the Germans moved out hurriedly to extricate themselves from a possible trap.

Hundreds of Germans caught by the advance of the Fifth Army to the Tiber were captured when they were unable to make their way across the waterway and retire to the north. At least 2,000 Nazis were taken prisoner in this manner.

Gen. Alphonse Juin's French troops meanwhile crossed Highway Five, main road from Rome to the Adriatic coast, at Tivoli in the foothills of the Sabine mountains.

Eighth army troops moved up through the central part of Italy battling the Germans some 20 miles east of Rome to push them from positions in the mountains.

The Nazi forces seeking to get away from the Rome sector suffered heavily when their troop convoys became jammed along the roadways and offered excellent targets for the Allied airmen who smashed their vehicles by the hundreds.

SCHOOL CHIEF SELECTED BY JACKSON TOWNSHIP

Robert D. Schaub was selected as superintendent of Jackson township schools Tuesday at the regular meeting of the board of education of that township. He has been serving as superintendent of the Scioto township schools for the last three years. Robert D. Latta, a member of the teaching staff of Jackson township schools for the last four years, was named by the board to serve as principal.

Mr. Schaub, who has been living in Ashville while serving on the Scioto school faculty, plans to continue as a resident of that village.

He has his A. B. degree from Wittenberg College and his masters degree from Ohio State university. He is taking work on his Ph. D. degree at the university.

Mr. Schaub has had 19 years experience as teacher, principal and superintendent.

Duvall passed physical examination with a group that was sent up over a month ago while Grimsley underwent his physical on May 26. Both youths will probably go to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station for their boot training.

AUTO PURCHASE PERMIT

A permit was issued for the purchase of one new passenger car in Pickaway county during the month of May, 308 titles were issued in the last month against 368 during the same month a year ago, 123 new mortgages were made and 113 mortgages were cancelled in the month. Mary K. Wallace of the Clerk of Courts office reports that four new car permits were issued during the month of April.

craft were carrying ground crews as well as equipment to the French coast for future use.

According to this information, air force engineering squadrons even were parachuted into France along with or soon after the first Allied troops which crashed through Europe's defenses to establish footholds on continental Europe.

There was no official announcement regarding establishment of an Allied air force "within Europe" but British broadcasts gave clear indications that this was part of the general Allied plan.

(A London broadcast said: "The first Royal Air Force squadron went ashore today on the French invasion coast to pave the way for a steady flood of RAF personnel who from now on will operate from the other side of the channel.

"These beach squadrons have the difficult job of bringing supplies to the spot. It's no easy matter for it takes 24 tons of oil and petrol to keep 12 Spitfires in the air for only four or five sorties.")

OPPOSITION TO NAVAL LANDINGS NEGLIGIBLE

Airmen Report Fiercest Fight Appears Raging In Bayeux Area

pear to be in progress in the Bayeux area of Northern France. This town is close to the channel coast on Seine bay about midway between Le Havre and Cherbourg.

The Allies, these fliers said, are making every effort to drive inland and the air forces are "co-operating tremendously" to liquidate enemy defenses.

"Very heavy fighting" has been experienced by Allied troops combating the Germans in some parts of Northern France, official information said.

This apparently applied to airborne landing places in the interior as well as on the beach-heads.

A spokesman used the term "very heavy fighting" in applications to "certain beachheads."

By midday yesterday, however, at least some of the areas concerned were "freed of direct German fire," probably by Allied air attack or naval bombardment.

No Naval Casualties

Although no naval casualties were suffered in the initial invasion thrusts, headquarters disclosed, some small craft were swamped.

This was due to unfavorable weather which "left considerable to be desired" in furtherance of the initial Allied success. Weather conditions were officially regarded as "better" this morning, with higher clouds aiding air support.

At 11 a. m. British time, however, there was a blustering wind over the Straits of Dover and occasional storm gusts, with waves in mid-channel about three feet high.

Conditions in the channel, however, had little or no effect upon myriads of Allied bombing, fighter and supply planes which swept over and back in shuttle attack throughout the day to bolster the invasion front and deal punishing new blows to Nazi defenses in France and Germany.

Although most of the enemy coastal batteries in the invasion area were stunned by preliminary Allied bombardment, some were not entirely obliterated, headquarters revealed, and since have come into action again.

Air and naval forces are now engaged in subjecting them.

The feeling at headquarters was that at the moment neither optimism nor pessimism can be expressed over the present stage of operations. The weather in general is still unfavorable, with improvements only slight.

The general attitude at headquarters was summed up by a spokesman who said that operations still were going according to plan, with the enemy not yet showing his hand fully and presumably loath to move up his reserves until he has more definite information. Bitter fighting then may be expected, it was said.

Communique No. 3 from the supreme headquarters of Allied armies which already have penetrated the main and secondary German defense lines in successful initiation of the greatest offensive in history said:

"Allied forces continued landings on the northern coast of France throughout yesterday and satisfactory progress was made."

"Rangers and Commandos formed part of the assaulting forces."

"No further attempt at interference with our seaborne landings was made by enemy naval forces."

"Those coastal batteries still in operation are being bombarded by Allied warships."

"At twilight yesterday and for the fourth time during the day our heavy bombers attacked railway communications and bridges in the general battle area."

"There was increased air opposition and 26 enemy aircraft which attempted to interfere were shot down."

"One Allied bomber and 17 fighters failed to return from this operation."

"Other enemy air activity included an attack on our beach forces."

"This proved abortive and four of a formation of 12 Junkers 88s were destroyed."

"In addition to attacks on defended positions and other objectives in immediate support of land operations, railway centers, bridges, military buildings and communications at Abancourt, Serquez, Amiens and Vire were attacked repeatedly throughout yesterday by our medium and light bombers."

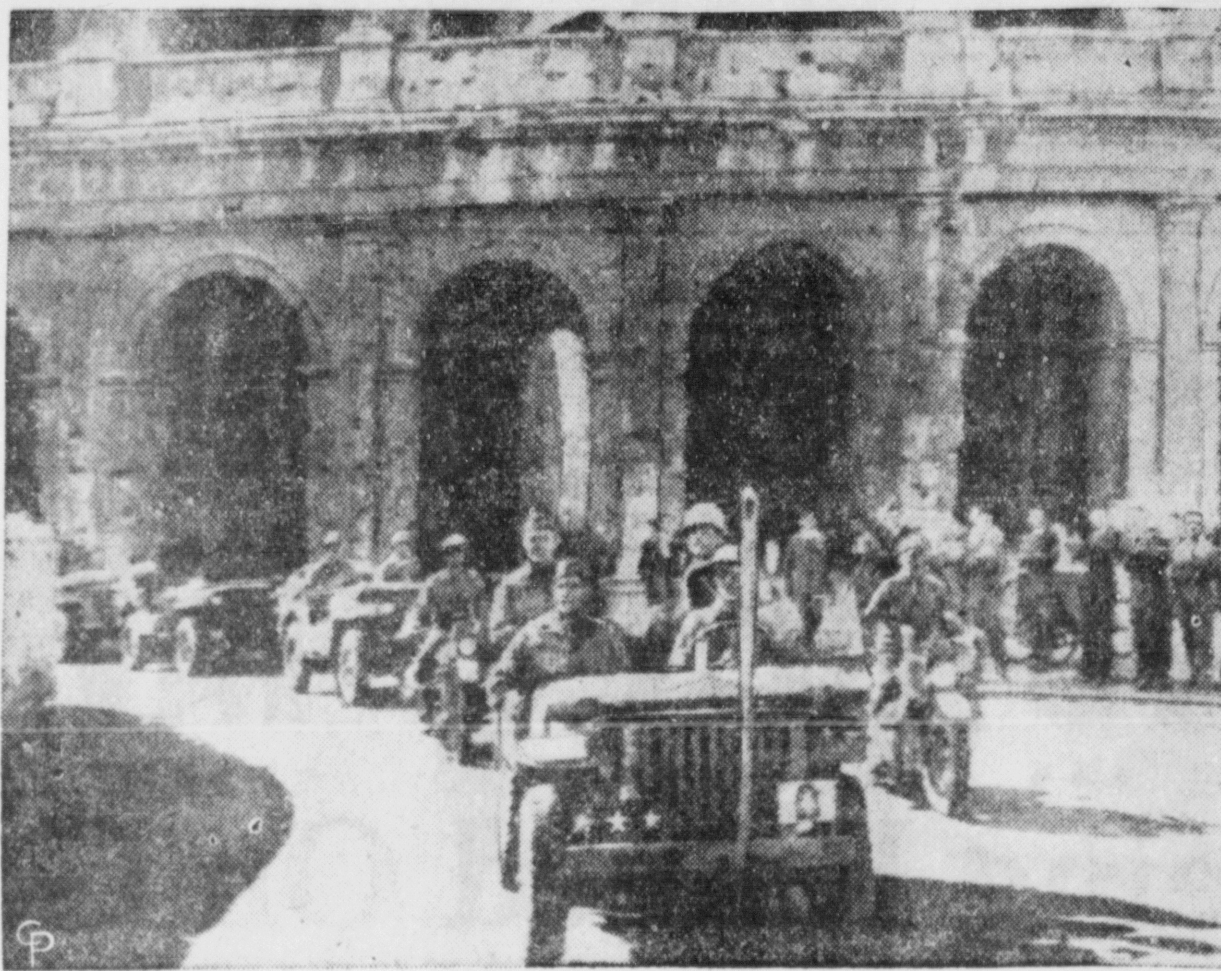

"Allied fighter-bombers and fighters flew low to attack enemy units and motor truck columns."

"From dawn until dusk a vast Allied fighter force maintained vigil over our shipping and over the assault area. This air cover was again completely successful."

"Air-borne operations were resumed successfully last night."

"Coastal aircraft attacked Ger-

regarding civil government of France.

3. Civil war rages in Yugoslavia between the Partisans and the Chetniks, preventing a solid front against Germany. Churchill has accused the Mihailovich forces of collaborating with the enemy, to which Mihailovich responds that "both the Allied and enemy propaganda are working to disrupt our military organizations."

All three of these political disorders were described as threatening immediate military operations.

The Polish distrust of the Soviets lies like a crater in the path of Soviet armies, about to advance through Poland against Germany.

Anglo-American distrust of De Gaulle threatens to impair French underground support of the invasion forces.

And civil war in Yugoslavia may prevent the desired junction of Allied forces in Rome with Yugoslav forces on the other side of the Adriatic.

MRS. ERCELL WRIGHT DIES AT NEW HOLLAND HOME

Mrs. Ercell Wright, 53, died at her home in New Holland, Tuesday. She was a past worthy matron of the New Holland Eastern Star chapter and was also active in school and church work until her health forced her to retire from these activities about a year ago.

Surviving are her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Irene Sorensen of New Jersey, and Mrs. Jean Bush, New Holland; a son, Harold Wright, of New Holland; her father, David Steinhauer, Clarksburg; a sister, Mrs. S. E. Bottenfield, Washington, C. H. and a brother, Ralph Steinhauer, Bourneville.

Funeral services will be held Friday at the Methodist church in New Holland of which she was a member. The Rev. V. C. Stump, officiating with burial in the New Holland cemetery.

PRAISE SOIL CULTURE

NEW YORK — Postwar production by America's 5,000,000 farms may equal that of 6,000,000 farms if all growers adopt soil conservation practices which have increased wartime yields by 20 percent on farms now enrolled in the program, according to food experts. Soil culture, they reported, has enhanced the quality as well as quantity of fruits and vegetables.

more dead Japs were accounted for in "mopping up operations."

Although adverse weather conditions prevented large scale operations in the Bismarck archipelago, all types of American bombers plastered Jap installations in the by-passed Wewak-Hansa bay area of New Guinea.

Lesser raids by medium bombers were carried out against Rabaul, New Britain, and "targets of opportunity" in New Ireland.

In the Dutch New Guinea area to the west of Biak, other Allied planes raided the Tual township in the Kei islands, as well as Numfor airbase and shipping near Manokvari. Two coastal vessels were sunk in the latter assault.

RED STAR PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO EISENHOWER

NEW YORK, June 7—The Soviet Army newspaper Red Star today paid this tribute to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower:

"The Atlantic wall is being stormed."

"The push across the channel is of inestimable importance."

"One of the greatest strategists of our time is conducting the operations."

"Germany now has to count with destructive blows from the west and east."

The tribute was broadcast by the British radio.

SHEEP CLAIMS ALLOWED

At the quarterly meeting of the Pickaway county commissioners, sheep claims in the amount of $269 and $55 on a claim of Ansell Whiteside, Deer Creek township, for two hogs killed by dogs were made.

The sheep claims paid went to Ralph Dennis, Monroe township, $25; Leonard Brady, Scioto, $54; Gus Valentine, Circleville, $20; Fred Reichelderfer, Salt Creek, $50; James Martin, Scioto, $20; Arthur Morris, Salt Creek, $40; Carson Horton, Circleville, $50; and S. Paul Valentine, Circleville, $20.

BULLETIN

LONDON, June 7—German broadcasts today reported a new Allied amphibious landing attempt across the Straits of Dover.

Between Dover and Calais on the northeastern coast of France the distance is only 21 miles.

Supreme headquarters of the Allied expeditionary force had no comment to make on the German claims of a landing attempt in the Calais area.

BULLETIN

LONDON, June 7—The German-controlled Paris radio reported today that a huge Allied armada comprising some 6,000 vessels, including heavy cruisers as escort and a swarm of landing vessels of all types, is now cruising off the Cherbourg peninsula.

"The naval guns of this fleet are engaged in artillery duels with the German shore batteries," Paris said.

MITCHELL FUNERAL

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in the Kirkpatrick funeral home, New Holland, for William J. Mitchell, 74, a prominent New Holland citizen and philanthropist, who died in University hospital, Columbus, Monday of a heart attack, a few minutes after being admitted to the hospital. He had been ill for about two months. Never having married, he spent his entire life in and around New Holland where he was at one time a section hand on the railroad, a carpenter and a blacksmith. He has aided many young persons of the community to secure homes by assisting them financially.

His only relatives are two nieces, Mrs. Leslie Clark, Columbus and Mrs. Grace Timmons, Dayton.

channel, the British plane crews watched the constant shuttle of ships to and from the beach-heads.

Supreme headquarters of the Allied expeditionary air force revealed that from dawn to dusk yesterday Allied air forces flew 13,000 sorties. The American Eighth Air Force flew 4,300 of these sorties and the Ninth Air Force flew 4,800.

Little Opposition

Crews at an advanced second tactical air force base who participated in night operations said they met practically no German air force resistance and encountered only sporadic anti-aircraft fire.

A road bridge crossing the river Dives, near Croissanville, was effectively bombed from low altitude.

Another squadron hammered the important road junction of Falaise. Still another attacked the road and railroad bridge in the Caumont de la Riviere area of Harcourt.

Lisieux was left well alight after an attack and numerous fires burned all over Normandy.

It was estimated that the bomb weight dropped by the great Allied aerial armadas throughout "D-Day" operations and before today's daylight sorties began totaled 22,500 tons.

Vast fleets went out shortly after 7 a. m. after a night of tremendous air activity which died down only at dawn.

The skies over the channel were cheerless as the daylight squadrons put out from England and there were huge banks of clouds.

Bombers Active

Royal Air Force heavy bombers, understood to number more than 1,000, took part in the night operations against occupied territory, blasting and burning German military objectives on and near the Normandy coast where Americans, Britons and Canadians are battling their way inland.

The RAF was understood to have provided non-stop air cover over the Normandy beaches throughout the night. The British planes met very little night fighter opposition.

THE 'RED BALL' WAS UP

NEW YORK — Policemen and officials of the Communist Political Association were amazed when three young sailors purchased tickets at Madison Square Garden and pushed through the gates with 20,000 other persons going to the first public rally of the newly organized association. The mystery was solved when one of the sailors finally located an usher and demanded: "Hey, Bud, where do you rent the skates?"

WOMEN EVERYWHERE

BANDON, Ore. — There's hardly any place now where you won't find women working. When the U. S. Engineers sent the harbor survey tug Kalama to take soundings in the Bandon harbor, six girls composed the technical crew. The young women knew their work thoroughly, according to the skipper.

led aerial assaults which smashed their transport columns.

Principal resistance was encountered by Eighth Army forces in the mountainous regions considerably east of Rome. Only weak resistance was met west of Rome beyond the Tiber where the Germans moved out hurriedly to extricate themselves from a possible trap.

Hundreds of Germans caught by the advance of the Fifth Army to the Tiber were captured when they were unable to make their way across the waterway and retreat to the north. At least 2,000 Nazis were taken prisoner in this manner.

Gen. Alphonse Juin's French troops meanwhile crossed Highway Five, main road from Rome to the Adriatic coast, at Tivoli in the foothills of the Sabine mountains.

Eighth army troops moved up through the central part of Italy battled the Germans some 20 miles east of Rome to push them from positions in the mountains.

The Nazi forces seeking to get away from the Rome sector suffered heavily when their troop convoys became jammed along the roadways and offered excellent targets for the Allied airmen who smashed their vehicles by the hundreds.

SCHOOL CHIEF SELECTED BY JACKSON TOWNSHIP

Robert D. Schauk was selected as superintendent of Jackson township schools Tuesday at the regular meeting of the board of education of that township. He has been serving as superintendent of the Scioto township schools for the last three years. Robert D. STATE URGES WATER PLANT IMPROVEMENT

Board Of Health Suggests
Changes If Property
Is Bought By City

Definite improvements on the water system for Circleville in event of its purchase by the city which include a water softening system, new wells and a reserve storage tank was advised by the state board of health in a letter read to the members of city council at their regular meeting Tuesday night. The letter also discussed the advisability of the proper financing of the purchase whereby sufficient funds are available for improvements.

The city has made an offer of $450,000 to the Ohio Water Service Company for the plant.

Only four members of council were present for the meeting Tuesday night, councilmen, Horn, Cook and Crites being absent.

Leonard Snodgrass of the Park commission extended an invitation to council to attend the opening of the Ted Lewis Park next Monday evening. No vote was taken on the ordinance authorizing payment to Miller Fissell for equipment purchased and used by him while employed by the city.

A report was read on the expenditures of the $3,500 for decoration equipment at Berger hospital. The money comes from the legacy of the Elizabeth Ruggles estate. $10,000 has been put into War Bonds and will be used for the erection of a new wing to the hospital after the war. $2,300 has been used in the purchase of a new boiler and stoker. The report on the $3,500 showed about $1,000 balance left in the fund, after the entire hospital has been painted and redecorated, new drapes purchased, new linens, kitchen equipment, a refrigerator for the nursery, a few new beds, bedside tables, bedside lamps, a light for the delivery room and a mirror for use in giving anesthetic, and an O. R. gas machine for surgery obtained.

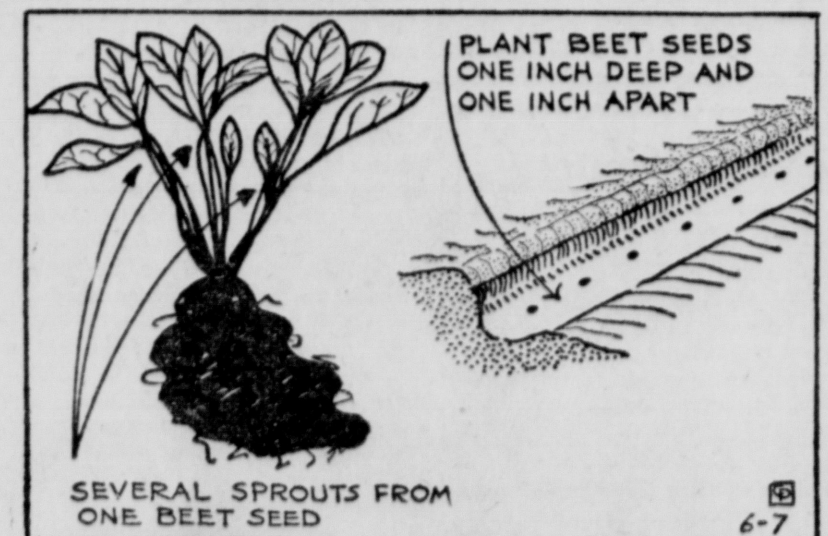

BIKE BOUNCES BOMBER

NEW YORK — Mrs. Charles Levinson, of Manhattan, has just received a letter reciting in detail the trials and tribulations of an American bomber pilot in England, who purchased an English bicycle very much like ours but slightly more impulsive. The bomber pilot was her son, Lieut. William A. Levinson, who paid sixteen quid, roughly about $64 for the vehicle. The first time Lieutenant Levinson mounted it, the bicycle ran into a tree. The optimistic officer concluded however, with: "But don't worry, mother. An English bike is almost as simple to operate as a B-24 and no more dangerous."

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Summer and Winter Beets in Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

BEET SEEDS are semi-hardy and can be planted in the Victory garden just as soon as it is possible to prepare the soil. Light frosts will not injure either the seeds or young plants.

Beets should not be planted in an area where potatoes were grown the previous season since potato scab is found on beets and this disease infects the soil from one year to another. The soil should not be limed for beets as this also tends to cause the development of scab disease.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, beet seeds should be sown thinly since it frequently happens that one kernel will send up several sprouts.

WHERE IS 'WRONG-WAY' CORRIGAN?

He's Flying Straight and True as Ace Test Pilot

By WILLIAM RUTLEDGE III
Central Press Correspondent
SANTA MONICA, Cal. — That affable, youthful Irishman you might see jumping into the cockpit of an A-20 attack bomber on the runway of the testing grounds at Douglas Aircraft plant is just who he looks like, Douglas Corrigan.

A lot of headlines have crowded his flying exploit of 1938 into a comparatively distant past; but he is still a real personality here.

You might expect that he would be an ace among the front line plane pilots over Nazi lines or Jap bases.

And he might be if it were not for the fact that the government decided that he could be more valuable to the war program by testing planes instead of flying them in combat.

From sunrise to sunset Doug is up in the clouds with these twin-engined bombers, putting them through every conceivable maneuver and test to determine their fitness for combat service.

For this work his pay envelopes add up to $600 or so monthly. He dresses in greasy flying togs and doesn't mind adding more dirt and grime to them.

Doug is a model of modesty and hard work. He tends strictly to his job of testing planes. Gone are the dramatics, the glamor, and gone, too, are the fickle hero-worshippers who have all but forgotten that he was once the headline personality of the nation.

His accumulation of war bonds and his saving account book are two matters of considerable pride with him. None of this war-time free and easy spending.

Before his flight into fame Corrigan was a welder in an aircraft plant in Minneapolis, albeit a cocky one. He stunned the world in 1938 by flying non-stop from New York to his ancestral Ireland on a trip with Los Angeles as its announced destination.

Despite his 37 years he still looks like a daring young man. He just grins sheepishly and tells you that he must have set his compass wrong when he made the hop over the Atlantic.

Upon his return to the United States, Doug was feted throughout the nation. The ticker tape deluge that descended upon him in such cities as New York and Chicago recalled the ovation accorded Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Doug's flight to Ireland cost him a mere $69 in gas and oil. He made the flight in a nine-year-old monoplane, which had been his personal aerial diver.

He realized more than $60,000 from his venture—book publishers, magazines, movies, newspaper syndicates, and advertising agencies for various endorsements.

After settling up with the bureau of internal revenue, he had $43,000 left for his personal use. Today he says he has about $25,000 of that still salted away.

When he looks at his two sons, three-year-old Doug, Jr., and six-months-old Harry, he opines that when they reach manhood that flying will be as commonplace as driving is today. And, of course, his sons will be up there flying.

As to his proclivity for doing things wrong, Douglas officials are not so sure that he is entirely cured.

About a year ago Corrigan was assigned to fly one of the bombers from the plant in Tulsa, Okla., to Memphis, Tenn. He had taken off and was straightening out for flight when his earphones crackled.

It was the dispatcher at the Tulsa airport. "Come on back, Corrigan. You're flying the wrong plane."

HEADQUARTERS, Panama Canal — Brig. Gen. William C. Christy walked into a Coast Artillery command post barbershop for a trim. The barber shooed off a line of waiting enlisted men, making a ceremonial bow as he invited the general to take the chair. Christy declined with a smile. As he took his place at the end of the line, Corp. George R. Stephenson, of Suffern, N. Y., nonchalantly climbed into the chair and ordered a "G. I. trim."

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wray Henry of North Court street have received an air-mail letter from their son, Don, dated May 29, in which he tells them that he is now up and walking around in the hospital in Italy where he has been recovering from wounds suffered in action. He mentioned that his clothes had been returned to him and that he thought that he soon would be discharged from the hospital. He probably will have a rest period before returning to action.

Ship Cook Glenn Malone phoned his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Malone Friday from Norfolk, after spending some time at sea. Young Malone, who is in charge of the cooks on a destroyer, reports that on a recent cruise his destroyer sank two German submarines and captured about twenty of their crews. These prisoners were taken to New York for internment in a prison camp.

Ashville — Fred E. Brobst was in Ashville Tuesday, giving instrumental lessons to several Harrison township youngsters.

Ashville — Helen Irwin has secured employment for the Summer with the State Department of Taxation in Columbus.

Ashville — Richard Peters and Clifton Mahaffey attended the meeting of the Circleville Chapter of Royal Arch Masons Monday.

Ashville — Intense interest in the invasion news was manifested in Ashville Tuesday. Almost every local family has a relative or a close friend in the armed forces stationed in England.

Ashville — Charles D. Eversole has secured employment for the Summer with the Ralston Steel Car Co., in Columbus. Mr. Eversole is the seventh grade teacher in the local school.

Ashville — The Ashville Garden Club will hold a picnic meeting Thursday evening at 7:00 at the home of Miss Nelle Oesterle.

Ashville — Mrs. Volley Prushing died suddenly Tuesday morning about 11:00 o'clock after suffering a heart attack. While Mrs. Prushing had not been enjoying the best of health, her death came as a shock to her many friends.

Amazing results in building STURDY BODIES!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

YOUNG people, especially those of grammar and high school age, are prone to be deficient in stomach digestive juices and red-blood.

A growing person who is operating on a 65 to 70% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped. In such cases Nature needs extra help. Organic troubles or focal infection, if they exist, must be corrected. Tissue foods must be digested and rich, red-blood must be present to build sturdy bodies. SSS Tonic is especially designed (1) to promote the flow of VITAL DIGESTIVE JUICES in the stomach which digest the food so the body can make proper use of it in tissue building and repair and (2) to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient.

These two important results enable the body to make use of the food as Nature intended. Thus you may gain a keen appetite . . . firm flesh . . . body energy . . . mental alertness!

STATE URGES WATER PLANT IMPROVEMENT

Board Of Health Suggests
Changes If Property
Is Bought By City

Definite improvements on the water system for Circleville in event of its purchase by the city which include a water softening system, new wells and a reserve storage tank was advised by the state board of health in a letter read to the members of city council at their regular meeting Tuesday night. The letter also discussed the advisability of the proper financing of the purchase whereby sufficient funds are available for improvements.

The city has made an offer of $450,000 to the Ohio Water Service Company for the plant.

Only four members of council were present for the meeting Tuesday night, councilmen, Horn, Cook and Crites being absent.

Leonard Snodgrass of the Park commission extended an invitation to council to attend the opening of the Ted Lewis Park next Monday evening. No vote was taken on the ordinance authorizing payment to Miller Fissell for equipment purchased and used by him while employed by the city.

A report was read on the expenditures of the $3,500 for decoration equipment at Berger hospital. The money comes from the legacy of the Elizabeth Ruggles estate. $10,000 has been put into War Bonds and will be used for the erection of a new wing to the hospital after the war. $2,300 has been used in the purchase of a new boiler and stoker. The report on the $3,500 showed about $1,000 balance left in the fund, after the entire hospital has been painted and redecorated, new drapes purchased, new linens, kitchen equipment, a refrigerator for the nursery, a few new beds, bedside tables, bedside lamps, a light for the delivery room and a mirror for use in giving anaesthetic, and an O. R. gas machine for surgery obtained.

BIKE BOUNCES BOMBER

NEW YORK — Mrs. Charles Levinson, of Manhattan, has just received a letter reciting in detail the trials and tribulations of an American bomber pilot in England, who purchased an English bicycle very much like ours but slightly more impulsive. The bomber pilot was her son, Lieut. William A. Levinson, who paid sixteen quid, roughly about $64 for the vehicle. The first time Lieutenant Levinson mounted it, the bicycle ran into a tree. The optimistic officer concluded however, with: "But don't worry, mother. An English bike is almost as simple to operate as a B-24 and no more dangerous."

AUTOMATIC FUEL SAVING

MINNEAPOLIS — Tests run on a large number of buildings in all parts of the country of 20 percent results when adequate automatic controls are used, the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Company announced here today. Postwar apartment dwellers, the company said, will have individual control over their heat supply, providing not only a fuel saving but also a new peak in heating comfort.

WHERE IS 'WRONG-WAY' CORRIGAN?

He's Flying Straight and True as Ace Test Pilot

By WILLIAM RUTLEDGE III
Central Press Correspondent
SANTA MONICA, Cal. — That affable, youthful Irishman you might see jumping into the cockpit of an A-20 attack bomber on the runway of the testing grounds at Douglas Aircraft plant is just who he looks like, Douglas Corrigan.

A lot of headlines have crowded his flying exploit of 1938 into a comparatively distant past; but he is still a real personality here.

You might expect that he would be an ace among the front line plane pilots over Nazi lines or Jap bases.

And he might be if it were not for the fact that the government decided that he could be more valuable to the war program by testing planes instead of flying them in combat.

From sunrise to sunset Doug is up in the clouds with these twin-engine bombers, putting them through every conceivable maneuver and test to determine their fitness for combat service.

For this work his pay envelopes add up to $600 or so monthly. He dresses in greasy flying togs and doesn't mind adding more dirt and grime to them.

Doug is a model of modesty and hard work. He tends strictly to his job of testing planes. Gone are the dramatics, the glamor, and gone, too, are the fickle hero-worshippers who have all but forgotten that he was once the headline personality of the nation.

His accumulation of war bonds and his saving account book are two matters of considerable pride with him. None of this war-time free and easy spending.

Before his flight into fame Corrigan was a welder in an aircraft plant in Minneapolis, albeit a cocky one. He stunned the world in 1938 by flying non-stop from New York to Los Angeles as its announced destination.

Despite his 37 years he still looks like a daring young man. He just grins sheepishly and tells you that he must have set his compasses wrong when he made the hop over the Atlantic.

Upon his return to the United States, Doug was feted throughout the nation. The ticker tape deluge that descended upon him in such cities as New York and Chicago recalled the landing accorded Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Doug's flight to Ireland cost him a mere $69 in gas and oil. He made the flight in a nine-year-old monoplane, which had been his personal aerial flivver.

He realized more than $60,000 from his venture—book publishers, magazines, movies, newspaper syndicates, and advertising agencies for various endorsements.

After settling up with the bureau of internal revenue, he had $43,000 left for his personal use. Today he says he has about $25,000 of that still salted away. When he looks at his two sons, three-year-old Doug, Jr., and six-months-old Harry, he opines that when they reach manhood that flying will be as commonplace as driving is today. And, of course, his sons will be up there flying.

As to his proclivity for doing things wrong, Douglas officials are not so sure that he is entirely cured.

About a year ago Corrigan was assigned to fly one of the bombers from the plant in Tulsa, Okla., to Memphis, Tenn. He had taken off and was straightening out for flight when his earphones cracked.

It was the dispatcher at the Tulsa airport. "Come on back, Corrigan. You're flying the wrong plane."

MOSTLY ALWAYS

A NEW BRITAIN BASE—Possibly for the first time in the history of music, a popular song has been dedicated by Marines to a common warehouse—full of G. I. corn beef. As the Marines pass this particular warehouse, they pause, and then give with their lusty voices, "Sunday, Monday, and Always."

A REGULAR GUY

HEADQUARTERS, Panama Canal — Brig. Gen. William C. Christy walked into a Coast Artillery command post barbershop for a trim. The barber shooed off a line of waiting enlisted men, making a ceremonial bow as he invited the general to take the chair. Christy declined with a smile. As he took his place at the end of the line, Corp. George R. Stephenson, of Suffern, N. Y., nonchalantly climbed into the chair and ordered a "G. I. trim."

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wray Henry of North Court street have received an air-mail letter from their son, Don, dated May 29, in which he tells them that he is now up and walking around in the hospital in Italy where he has been recovering from wounds suffered in action. He mentioned that his clothes had been returned to him and that he thought that he soon would be discharged from the hospital. He probably will have a rest period before returning to action.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Summer and Winter Beets in Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

BEET SEEDS are semi-hardy and can be planted in the Victory garden just as soon as it is possible to prepare the soil. Light frosts will not injure either the seeds or young plants.

Beets should not be planted in an area where potatoes were grown the previous season since potato scab is found on beets and this disease infects the soil from one year to another. The soil should not be limed for beets as this also tends to cause the development of scab disease.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, beet seeds should be sown thinly since it frequently happens that one kernel will send up several sprouts.

Sometimes as many as six or even eight sprouts develop from one seed.

The first planting of beets can be used during the summer as greens as well as tender young beets for the table. Later plantings can be used for canning, pickling and winter storage.

When planting early beets space the seeds one inch apart along the row and one inch deep, as illustrated. The distance apart of the rows will depend upon the size of the garden and the type of cultivator used. The rows may vary from 14 to 24 inches apart.

Beet seeds planted in midsummer are set deeper (two inches), since the soil is drier then.

GOOD GUYS

SPEAKING of a comrade who recently was killed in a flight over Berlin, a young sergeant who was with him says: "Every member of the crew went to the funeral. It was in a pretty, peaceful spot. He never suffered. He never knew he was hit. He was a good guy."

A civilian back home might sit and think a long time about that. And many a man still in the perilous fighting might find calm and comfort in the story. Death coming to a man so quietly that he didn't suffer and didn't even know it, and whose comrades remember him appreciatively as "a good guy," and lay him in a pretty, peaceful spot for his last sleep—well, that's not so bad. Quite aside from scriptural promises, there is a sort of heart-warming immortality about it. Many still live, and will continue living, in such remembrance.

MAKE WAY FOR BRAZIL

THE largest of the Latin-American countries and probably the strongest, now engages in a historic enterprise. It is sending 15,000 troops to Europe, fully trained and equipped, to play their part in the big war for democracy. It seems to be the first time any such formal step has been taken by any New World nations except the United States and Canada.

This is not only a help for the United States and its European associates, but a token. It means that our Latin neighbors are coming of age in an international way. It is reassuring to know that they do this freely, without any kind of compulsion, and largely as a neighborly gesture toward their Uncle Sam.

Brazilians are by no means unknown in Europe. In common with many other Latin-Americans, they are probably as familiar with the Old World as North Americans are. They are about as near to Europe as to the United States, geographically, and more so culturally. But they are good, friendly neighbors, who understand and like us, and their sentiments are naturally reciprocated.

MARTIAL PRIDE

ONE of the political candidates recently delivered himself of this utterance:

"America will emerge from this war with a navy twice the size of that of any two other combined powers, with the largest army in the world, and with an air force almost incalculable in size. It will then be up to the rest of the world to cooperate with us for peace."

This sounds like the perfect attitude to adopt if we want the rest of the world to combine against us the first chance they get.

WASHINGTON Report

G. O. P. Leaders' Coolness
Toward Dewey a Puzzler

Wallace May Be Tough
To Move Out of Picture

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt said the other day that when he was at Bernard Baruch's place in South Carolina he was away from Washington and so he could think. I'd like to put that last phrase down exactly in his own words. But it is against the rules to quote the president of the United States directly.

Anyhow, you can easily understand what Mr. Roosevelt meant this time, which some people say isn't always possible. He meant that Washington with its pushing, pulling, squirming personalities and causes is hard on vision and brain power. There is too much to see and hear. And very little that seems to make sense.

Therefore, it is understandable that after you have wedged your way into a train or plane with nose turned away from the Potomac, you soon find you are asking yourself questions about this silly place.

Among the questions I asked myself the last time I was outward bound were these:

Why are many Republicans in Congress so lukewarm about Governor Thomas E. Dewey? They sort of mumble when you mention him and say, "Well, I don't know—well—" Obviously the able governor of New York has the convention vote he needs but you hear few personal cheers for him.

Why are the Republicans not too keen about any of their own people as presidential candidates? They saw red and greenish yellow when Willkie was honking about for the nomination. Can't they agree on Frank G. O. P. hopeful? Is their only point of agreement—the defeat of Franklin Roosevelt?

How do you explain the pogrom against Henry Wallace? There is a pogram against the vice president. It is working within Mr. Wallace's own party. New Dealers and old line Democrats are trying to do the gentleman from Iowa in and out of Number Two place on the Chicago ticket.

But something tells me Wallace won't be done in. He has a cowlick.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

HOT FIGHT RAGES

WASHINGTON—Both sides are playing it down in the news, but a red hot GOP controversy is raging round the large and not easily moved frame of Wendell Willkie.

The tug-of-war is to get him committed to go along with the Republican candidate—and there doesn't seem much doubt that the candidate will be Dewey. GOP leaders with their ears to the ground figure that Willkie has a big bloc of do-or-die followers who will follow him to the bitter end, and that these followers could tip the scale between victory or defeat. They figure that a million votes at a minimum could be swung away from the Republicans to Roosevelt, should Willkie choose to support the President.

That is why men close to Willkie, such as Harry Luce, publisher of Time, Life and Fortune, have been urging him to get on the Dewey band-wagon.

On the other hand, a few die-hards such as Clarence Budington Kelland, Arizona novelist who was deposed as publicity chief of the Republican National Committee, have been passing out word that they don't want Willkie's support for Dewey. Kelland is a close friend of Herbert Hoover's, was one of Hoover's guests at the famous Bohemian Grove celebration near San Francisco. However, it is not known whether he voices Hoover's ideas when he wants Willkie to be spurned.

Simultaneously, certain other GOP leaders apparently worried about Kelland's sour-grapes attitude, have been making advances to Willkie. The last thing they want is to lose the Willkie bloc of votes.

CAPITAL CHAFF

At one time, Madame Chiang Kai-Shek was almost persuaded by vivacious Bob Smith, general manager of the Los Angeles News, to write a daily column rivaling Mrs. Roosevelt's. But Madame Chiang's advisers vetoed the idea. Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt is coming back from Turkey for conferences. Despite all the Allied pressure, plus Allied lend-lease, Nazi Ambassador Von Papen has been able to keep the Turks in line. Von Papen was German military attache in Washington before the U.S.A. entered the last war and was later shown to have plotted to blow up the Welland Canal and to have been involved in other large scale sabotage. The rump convention of South Carolina Negroes, who will seek seats at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, will not be seated on the ground that they did not hold county conventions. Actually, their convention was a spur-of-the-moment matter, organized by one man, and did not represent the Negroes of South Carolina.

OWI VICTORY

The recent Congressional appropriation for the Office of War Information was a real victory for patient, unperturbed OWI chief Elmer Davis. How hot the battle was, can be gathered from an incident involving New York Daily News columnist John O'Donnell, who was working in close contact with bitter OWI opponent Representative John Taber of New York.

O'Donnell had written a long diatribe against OWI based on material allegedly received from Australia. This article came up before the House Appropriations Com-

Cowlicks look easy scalping. But they aren't. Not if worn by a man who began as "A Mystic" (remember that was his early tag), and became the second most important official in the United States. If I were one of the boys bent on finishing Henry Wallace I'd stop a minute and pray for help in overcoming this corn-fed mystic with a practical hand.

Another question—how many of the people in Washington whom we now hear about or know will emerge after the war as definitely undesirable? Surely there are dozens of clever spies operating in the capital.

Ever so often in a flash of suspicion you think: "Could it be possible that she is a spy?" Or, "Why did he say that?" There were astonishing revelations after the last war when spies were easily detected with the naked eye.

The Matti Harris don't dress as they once did. The male secret agents are no longer done by Brooks Brothers and further adorned with dark red carnation boutonnieres. Undoubtedly we are much too careless and trusting!

● ONE MORE QUESTION—Won't the House of Representatives be a good theater for one and all if and when the electorate adds another charming actress to its floor show? Helen Gahagan from out in California's Hollywood has just won the Democratic nomination in the primary fight.

The winning was an extreme pleasure to Miss Gahagan and her friends. But it was a surprise to her husband, former Moving Picture Actor Melvyn Douglas.

Douglas, who enlisted in the Army as a private and worked his way up to captain, is at present in the India-China-Burma war theater. He didn't know that his wife was a candidate for Congress until he read the bright news of her victory in Yank magazine. Since then Miss Gahagan has wired Mr. Douglas confirming the news. She has had no reply. However, she has a hunch that Mr. Douglas won't mind. Miss Gahagan is a lissome creature, slender and lovely. She can sing as well as act, look pretty, make smart speeches, ring voters' door bells and believe unflinchingly in the New Deal.

I saw and heard Miss Gahagan in "Tonight or Never." I speak the truth when I say that Miss Gahagan or Mrs. Douglas, whatever you call her, will be a trial to Mrs. Clare Luce.

It will be marvelous to watch the two prima donnas, east and west coast variety, putting on their acts.

LAFF-A-DAY

DIET AND HEALTH

Children's Skin Ills of Contagious Type

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE SKIN of the youngster is not subject to so many diseases as that of the adult. The youngster has not yet been inducted into the mysteries of rouge and lip

Dr. Clendening, will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

stick and nail polish and shaving cream and hair dye and lash curlers, so escapes a good many forms of contact dermatitis, and such adult changes as psoriasis and herpes zoster and leukoplakia await it in the future.

Skin diseases in infancy and childhood come down pretty much to the contagious types, measles, scarlet fever, chickenpox, and infantile eczema and impetigo and tinea and scabies.

Infantile eczema begins a few months after birth and is really something both to see and to try to cure. The poor little baby's face and hands and large parts of the body are covered with a weeping, itching, scaling eruption that naturally drives it irritable to the verge of delirium.

Probably an Allergy

It is undoubtedly an allergy, but allergy to what is a mystery. The best guess is some kind of food, but it is hard to explain what. Nearly every case gets well spontaneously at about two years of age and since the diet is not abruptly changed at that age, and the baby eats about the same things it did when it had eczema the question arises "why." Perhaps the allergy develops an immunity to whatever food it was sensitive to.

In the treatment of infantile eczema the parents should be reconciled that rapid or sudden cure is not likely. The best that can be done is to keep the condition as well under control as possible and to eliminate all extra sources of irritation. The clothing should be light, avoiding woolen, silk or rubber garments.

Soap and water must be used very infrequently if at all. Oatmeal baths are used. The skin must be mopped, not rubbed dry. Prevent scratching by elbow cuffs. Dressings of aluminum acetate diluted 1 to 16 with water are often grateful and if tolerated, tar or crude oil tar ointments are helpful. Generalized exposures to ultra-violet light three times a week have a tonic effect.

Don't Starve Child

It is important not to starve the child in an attempt to eliminate the offending foods. Milk, eggs and wheat are the common offenders, but it is hard to construct a dietary without them and it is more important that the subject's nutrition does not suffer than that some added allergic response flare up.

Impetigo, pus infection of the skin, is the commonest skin disease of infancy and childhood. The causative factor is the infant's predilection for handling all sorts of things, clean and dirty. Besides as a causative factor the infant's skin is delicate, an easy object of invasion for germs and it has not yet acquired the immunity that the adult skin gets in time. Impetigo arises suddenly with angry red pustular spots and blisters. While it usually involves the face it may occur anywhere.

Treatment of Impetigo

In the treatment of impetigo the child should be isolated just as if it had a contagious disease which indeed it has. The crusts should be removed with warm water and soap. Sulfathiazole, or some form of sulfa drugs have been a godsend in the treatment of this troublesome and often serious offender.

Fungus infections in childhood are represented mostly by the tinea infections of the scalp. They appear as areas of partial baldness with the rest of the hairs covered with scales and stubby and brittle. It is often contracted from cat and dog pets. In treatment the head should be shaved. Applications of ointments or lotions containing salicylic acid or sulphur will usually kill off the parasite allowing the skin to heal, but in stubborn cases the X-ray may have to be called into use.

Scabies, or itch-infestation with the itch mite, is common in infancy and childhood. The scales appear mostly in the webs of the fingers or in the armpits, or in the buttocks. They itch intolerably. Sulphur ointment 5% usually results in a prompt cure.

For Wednesday, June 7

A PROSPEROUS and progressive day is read from the predominant astral influences, with money and possessions as well as the position enjoying expansion, promotion and general good fortune. However there may be stubborn obstacles as well as subtlety and trickery to handle shrewdly and with acumen. It is propitious for making new deals of magnitude. Romance and friendship, with festive celebrations, are quite in the picture, but take pains not to overdo or be carried to any forms of excess or extremes, in either business or social functions.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of happiness, expansion, promotion and good luck, with possible inheritance or gifts of substantial value. It should be a time for closing deals and aiming at high goals and ambitions, despite impediments or tenacious situations. These should be handled with sagacity, alertness and clever manipulations of fraud or treachery. Romantic celebrations, courtships, marriages may be in order, but call for moderation and good judgment lest excess or reckless behaviour begot serious regrets. A child born on this day may

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

The first snow fell. Hermy was busy planning her Christmas baskets for the Poor Farm. Up in the hills skis were flashing and boys watched restlessly for the ponds to freeze.

But Nora ... Nora and Jim were enigmas. She recovered from her Thanksgiving Day "indisposition," a little paler, a little thinner, a little more nervous, but self-possessed. She would not talk about that incident to anyone.

Her mother tried. "Nora, what's wrong? You can tell me—"

"Nothing. What's the matter with everybody?"

"But Jim's drinking, dear. It's all over town," groaned Hermy. "It's getting to be a disgrace! And you and Jim are quarreling—that's a fact..."

Nora set her small mouth. "Mother, you'll simply have to let me run my own life."

"Your father's worried—"

"I'm sorry, Mother. It's my life."

"Is it Rosemary who's causing all these arguments? She's always taking Jim off and whispering to him. How long is she going to stay with you?"

But Nora ran away, crying.

Pat was aging visibly. "Ellery, the three letters... they're still in Nora's hatbox in her closet. I looked last night."

"I know," sighed Ellery. "You've been keeping tabs, too?"

"Yes. Somebody's been reading them. They show signs of being handled—"

"But why won't Nora face the truth?" cried Pat. "She knows that November twenty-eighth marked the first attack—that first letter told her so! Yet she won't have the doctor, she won't take any steps to defend herself, she refuses help... I can't understand her!"

"Maybe," said Ellery carefully, "Nora's afraid to face the scandal."

Pat's eyes opened wide as Queen continued: "You told me how she retreated from the world when Jim left her on their scheduled wedding day several years ago. There's a deep streak of pride in your sister Nora. Pat. She can't abide being talked about. If this ever came out—"

"That's it," conceded Pat. "I was stupid not to have seen it before. She's ignoring it, like a child. Close your eyes and you won't see the bogeyman. You're right, Ellery. It's the town she's afraid of!"

Monday evening before Christmas, Mr. Queen was sitting on a stump just near the woods, watching 400 Hill Drive. There was no moon; it was a still night and sounds carried crisply and far.

Jim and Nora were at it again. Mr. Queen chafed his cold hands. It was about money. Nora was shrill. Where was he spending his money? What had happened to her car? brooch?

"Jim, you've got to tell me. This can't go on. It can't!"

Jim's voice was a mutter at first, but then it began to rise with, "Don't put me through a third degree!"

The detective-author listened intently for something new, a clue; but he heard nothing he had not already learned. He rose from the stump and made for the Wright house and warmth. Suddenly he stopped. The front door of Calamity House—how much after the phrase seemed these days!—had slammed.

Ellery sprinted through the snow, keeping in the shadows of the big house.

Jim Haight was plowing down the walk unevenly. He jumped into his car.

Ellery ran to the Wright garage. He had an arrangement with Pat:

she always left the keys of her convertible in the ignition lock for his use in an emergency.

Jim's car sloshed down the Hill at a dangerous pace, and Ellery followed. He did not turn on Pat's headlights; he could see well enough by the lights of Jim's car.

Route 16... Vic Carlati's...

It was almost ten o'clock when Jim staggered out of the Hot Spot and got into his car again. By its weave and lurch Ellery knew Jim's condition. Was he going home?

No. The turn-off to town. Going into town!

Jim skidded to a stop before a poor wooden tenement in the heart of Low Village. He reeled into the dark hallway.

A 25-watt bulb burned drearily in the hall. Ellery saw Jim creep up the stairs, knock at a door with a paint-blistered panel.

"Jim!" Lola Wright's exclamation.

The door closed.

Ellery slipped up the stairs, feeling each step for its creaky spot before putting his full weight on it. At the landing, the detective-author went swiftly to Lola's door and pressed his ear to the thin panel.

"But you got to," he heard Jim cry. "Lola, don't turn me down. I'm despit't..."

"But I've told you, Jim, I haven't any money," said Lola's cool voice. "Here, sit down. Now, what are you desperate about?"

"There isn't that more comfortable? Come on, Jim, tell little Lola all about it."

Haight began to weep. His weeping became muffled. Suddenly Lola gasped, as if in pain, and Ellery was about to crash through the door.

"Jim! You pushed me!"

"All a same! You said, tell Lola. Oh, yeah? Well, I'm not tellin' you anything!"

"Jim, you'd better go home."

"Gonna gimme dough, or not gimme?"

"But Jim, I told you..."

"Nobody'll gimme dough! Get in trouble, his own wife won't shell out. Know what I oughta do? I oughta—"

"What, Jim?"

"Nothin'. Nothin'..." His voice trailed. There was a long interval. And then he heard Lola's faint cry and Jim's awakening snort.

"I said take your own stuff off me!"

"Jim, I want't you—fell asleep—"

"You were searchin' me! What you lookin' for? Huh?"

"Jim. Don't... do that. You're hurting me." Lola's voice was well controlled.

"I'll hurt you plenty! I'll show you—"

Mr. Queen opened the door.

Lola and Jim were teetering on a worn patch of carpet in the middle of the room. His arms were around her and he was trying to bend her backward. She had the heel of her hand under his chin. His head was far back, his eyes glaring.

"The United States Marines!" murmured Mr. Queen as he plucked Jim from Lola, and sat him down on a sagging sofa. Jim covered his face with his hands. "Any damage, Lola?"

"No," she panted. "But just how much did you hear?"

"Just a scuffling," said Ellery mildly. "I was coming up to pay you that long-overdue visit. What's the matter with Jim?"

"Plastered." Lola gave him her full face now. "Poor Nora! I can't imagine why he came here. Do you suppose he's fallen in love with me?"

"You ought to be able to answer that yourself," replied Ellery. "Well, Mr. Haight, I think you'd best say nighty-night to your sister-in-law and let me take you home."

Jim sat there looking; then he stopped and his head flopped. He was asleep doubled up.

"Lola," said Ellery quickly. "What do you know about this business?"

"What business?" Her eyes met his, but they told nothing.

After a moment Ellery smiled. Then he slung Jim across his shoulders: Lola held the door open.

"Two cars?"

"His and mine—or rather Pat's."

"I'll drive Jim's back in the morning. Just leave it parked outside," said Lola. "And Mr. Smith—"

"Miss Wright?"

"Call again."

"Perhaps."

"Only next time," Lola smiled, "knock."

With unexpected firmness, John F. took command for the family.

"No fuss, Hermy," he said, wagging his thin forefinger at her. "This Christmas somebody else does the work."

"John Fowler Wright, what on earth—?"

"We're all going up to the mountains for Christmas dinner. We'll spend the night at the Lodge, and roast chestnuts around Bill York's fire."

"John, that a silly idea! Nora took my Thanksgiving away from me, now you want my Christmas. I won't hear of it."

But after looking into her husband's eyes, Hermy stopped arguing.

So Ed Hotchkiss was hired to drive the Christmas gifts up to Bill York's Lodge on top of Bald Mountain, with a note to Bill from John, concerning dinner, and lodgings, and "special preparations"—old John was mighty mysterious about the whole thing, chortling like a boy.

They were to drive up to Bald Mountain in two cars directly after dinner Christmas Eve. Everything was ready—the snow chains were on the rear tires, old Lodie had already left, released for the holiday, and they were stamping out outside the Wrights' mysterious door.

Jim and Nora to join them—when the door of Nora's house opened and out came Rosemary Haight, alone.

"Where are Jim and Nora?" called Hermy. "We'll never get to the Lodge!"

Rosemary shrugged. "Nora's not going."

"What?"

"She says she doesn't feel well."

They found Nora in bed, still and weak and greenish, and Jim prowling aimlessly about the room.

"It's nothing," declared Nora; but it was an effort for her to talk. "Just my stomach. You all go on ahead to the Lodge."

"We'll do no such thing," said Pat indignantly. "Jim, haven't you called Dr. Willoughby?"

"She won't let me."

"Won't let you? What's she got to say about it? I'm going down stairs this minute—"

"Pat," faltered Nora. Her sister stopped. "Don't."

"Nora Nora—"

"I won't have it," she said through her teeth. "I'm saying this for the last time. I won't have interference. Do you understand? I'm all right. I'm—all-right."

Nora bit her lip, then with an effort continued: "Now please. Go on. If I feel better in the morning, Jim and I will join you at the Lodge."

GOOD GUYS
SPEAKING of a comrade who recently was killed in a flight over Berlin, a young sergeant who was with him says: "Every member of the crew went to the funeral. It was in a pretty, peaceful spot. He never suffered. He never knew he was hit. He was a good guy."
A civilian back home might sit and think a long time about that. And many a man still in the perilous fighting might find calm and comfort in the story. Death coming to a man so quietly that he didn't suffer and didn't even know it, and whose comrades remember him appreciatively as "a good guy," and lay him in a pretty, peaceful spot for his last sleep—well, that's not so bad. Quite aside from scriptural promises, there is a sort of heart-warming immortality about it. Many still live, and will continue living, in such remembrance.

MAKE WAY FOR BRAZIL
THE largest of the Latin-American countries and probably the strongest, now engages in a historic enterprise. It is sending 15,000 troops to Europe, fully trained and equipped, to play their part in the big war for democracy. It seems to be the first time any such formal step has been taken by any New World nation except the United States and Canada.
This is not only a help for the United States and its European associates, but a token. It means that our Latin neighbors are coming of age in an international way. It is reassuring to know that they do this freely, without any kind of compulsion, and largely as a neighborly gesture toward their Uncle Sam.
Brazilians are by no means unknown in Europe. In common with many other Latin-Americans, they are probably as familiar with the Old World as North Americans are. They are about as near to Europe as to the United States, geographically, and more so culturally. But they are good, friendly neighbors, who understand and like us, and their sentiments are naturally reciprocated.

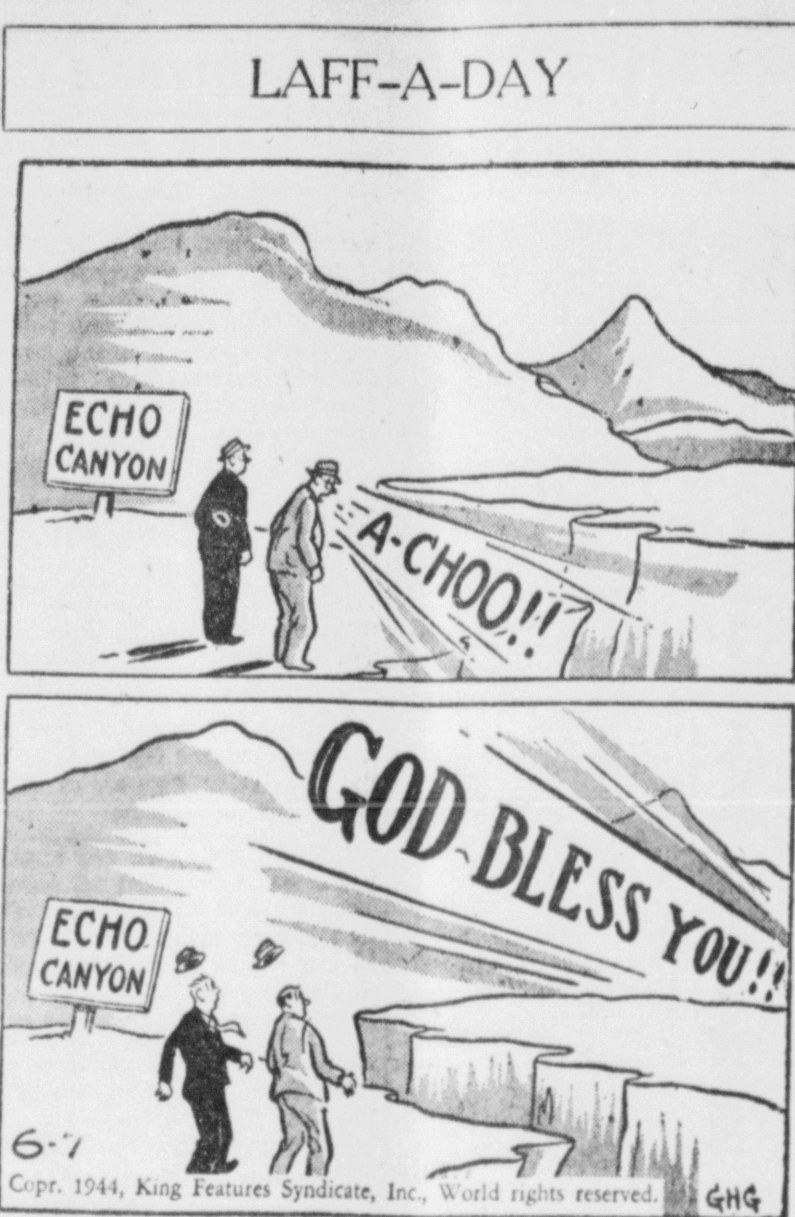

MARTIAL PRIDE
ONE of the political candidates recently delivered himself of this utterance: "America will emerge from this war with a navy twice the size of that of any two other combined powers, with the largest army in the world, and with an air force almost incalculable in size. It will then be up to the rest of the world to cooperate with us for peace."
This sounds like the perfect attitude to adopt if we want the rest of the world to combine against us the first chance they get.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
By DREW PEARSON

HOT FIGHT RAGES
WASHINGTON—Both sides are playing it down in the news, but a red hot GOP controversy is raging round the large and not easily moved frame of Wendell Willkie.
The tug-of-war is to get him committed to go along with the Republican candidate—and there doesn't seem much doubt that the candidate will be Dewey. GOP leaders with their ears to the ground figure that Willkie has a big bloc of do-or-die followers who will follow him to the bitter end, and that these followers could tip the scale between victory or defeat. They figure that a million votes at a minimum could be swung away from the Republicans to Roosevelt, should Willkie choose to support the President.
That is why men close to Willkie, such as Harry Luce, publisher of Time, Life and Fortune, have been urging him to get on the Dewey band-wagon.
On the other hand, a few die-hards such as Clarence Budington Kelland, Arizona novelist who was deposed as publicity chief of the Republican National Committee, have been passing out word that they don't want Willkie's support for Dewey. Kelland is a close friend of Herbert Hoover's, was one of Hoover's guests at the famous Bohemian Grove celebration near San Francisco. However, it is not known whether he voices Hoover's ideas when he wants Willkie to be spurned.
Simultaneously, certain other GOP leaders apparently worried about Kelland's sour-grapes attitude, have been making advances to Willkie. The last thing they want is to lose the Willkie bloc of votes.

OWI VICTORY
The recent Congressional appropriation for the Office of War Information was a real victory for patient, unperturbed OWI chief Elmer Davis. How hot the battle was, can be gathered from an incident involving New York Daily News columnist John O'Donnell, who was working in close contact with bitter OWI opponent Representative John Taber of New York.
O'Donnell had written a long diatribe against OWI based on material allegedly received from Australia. This article came up before the House Appropriations Com- (Continued on Page Eight)

DIET AND HEALTH
Children's Skin Ills of Contagious Type

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.
THE SKIN of the youngster is not subject to so many diseases as that of the adult. The youngster has not yet been inducted into the mysteries of rouge and lip stick and nail polish and shaving cream and hair dye and lash curlers, so escapes a good many forms of contact dermatitis, and such adult changes as psoriasis and herpes zoster and leukoplakia await it in the future.
Skin diseases in infancy and childhood come down pretty much to the contagious types, measles, scarlet fever, chickenpox, and infantile eczema and impetigo and tinea and scabies.
Infantile eczema begins a few months after birth and is really something both to see and to try to cure. The poor little baby's face and hands and large parts of the body are covered with a weeping, itching, scaling eruption that naturally drives it irritable to the verge of delirium.
Probably an Allergy
It is undoubtedly an allergy, but allergy to what is a mystery. The best guess is some kind of food, but it is hard to explain what. Nearly every case gets well spontaneously at about two years of age and since the diet is not abruptly changed at that age, and the baby eats about the same things it did when it had eczema the question arises "why." Perhaps the allergy develops an immunity to whatever food it was sensitive to.
In the treatment of infantile eczema the parents should be reconciled that rapid or sudden cure is not likely. The best that can be done is to keep the condition as well under control as possible and eliminate all extra sources of irritation. The clothing should be light, avoiding woolen, silk or rubber garments.
Soap and water must be used very infrequently if at all. Oatmeal baths are used. The skin must be mopped, not rubbed dry. Prevent scratching by elbow cuffs. Dressings of aluminum acetate diluted 1 to 16 with water are often grateful and if tolerated, tar or crude oil tar ointments are helpful. Generalized exposures to ultraviolet light three times a week have a tonic effect.
Don't Starve Child
It is important not to starve the child in an attempt to eliminate the offending foods. Milk, eggs and wheat are the common offenders, but it is hard to construct a dietary without them and it is more important that the subject's nutrition does not suffer than that some added allergic response flare up.

G. O. P. Leaders' Coolness Toward Dewey a Puzzle
Wallace May Be Tough To Move Out of Picture
By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist
WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt said the other day that when he was at Bernard Baruch's place in South Carolina he was away from Washington and so he could think. I'd like to put that last phrase down exactly in his own words. But it is against the rules to quote the president of the United States directly.
Anyhow, you can easily understand what Mr. Roosevelt meant this time, which some people say isn't always possible. He meant that Washington with its pushing, pulling, squirming personalities and causes is hard on vision and brain power. There is too much to see and hear. And very little that seems to make sense.
Therefore, it is understandable that after you have wedged your way into a train or plane with nose turned away from the Potomac, you soon find you are asking yourself questions about this silly place.
Among the questions I asked myself the last time I was outward bound were these:
Why are many Republicans in Congress so lukewarm about Governor Thomas E. Dewey? They sort of mumble when you mention him and say, "Well, I don't know—well—" Obviously the able governor of New York has the convention votes he needs but you hear few personal cheers for him.
Why are the Republicans not too keen about any of their own people as presidential candidates? They saw red and greenish yellow when Willkie was honking about for the nomination. Can't they agree on any G. O. P. hopeful? Is their only point of agreement—the defeat of Franklin Roosevelt?
How do you explain the pogrom against Henry Wallace? There is a pogrom against the vice president. It is working within Mr. Wallace's own party. New Dealers and old line Democrats are trying to do the gentleman from Iowa in. In and—out of Number Two place on the Chicago ticket.
But something tells me Wallace won't be done in. He has a cowlick.

Cowlicks look easy scalping. But they aren't. Not if worn by a man who began as "A Mystic" (remember that was his early tag), and became the second most important official in the United States. If I were one of the boys bent on finishing Henry Wallace I'd stop a minute and pray for help in overcoming this corn-fed mystic with a practical hand.
Another question—how many of the people in Washington whom we now hear about or know will emerge after the war as definitely undesirable? Surely there are dozens of clever spies operating in the capital.
Ever so often in a flash of suspicion you think: "Could it be possible that she is a spy?" Or, "Why did he say that?" There were astonishing revelations after the last war when spies were easily detected with the naked eye.
The Matti Harris don't dress as they once did. The male secret agents are no longer done by Brooks Brothers and further adorned with dark red carnation boutonnieres. Undoubtedly we are much too careless and trusting!
ONE MORE QUESTION—Won't the House of Representatives be a good theater for one and all if and when the electorate adds another charming actress to its floor show? Helen Gahagan from out in California's Hollywood has just won the Democratic nomination in the primary fight.
The winning was an extreme pleasure to Miss Gahagan and her friends. But it was a surprise to her husband, former Moving Picture Actor Melvyn Douglas.
Douglas, who enlisted in the Army as a private and as Member of House, worked his way up to captain, is at present in the India-China-Burma war theater. He didn't know that his wife was a candidate for Congress until he read the bright news of her victory in Yank magazine. Since then Miss Gahagan has wired Mr. Douglas confirming the news. She has had no reply. However, she has a hunch that Mr. Douglas won't mind. Miss Gahagan is a lissome creature, slender and lovely. She can sing as well as act, look pretty, make smart speeches, ring voters' door bells and believe unflinchingly in the New Deal.
I saw and heard Miss Gahagan in "Tonight or Never." I speak the truth when I say that Miss Gahagan or Mrs. Douglas, whatever you call her, will be a trial to Mrs. Clare Luce.
It will be marvelous to watch the two prima donnas, east and west coast variety, putting on their acts.

STARS SAY—

For Wednesday, June 7
A PROSPEROUS and progressive day is read from the predominant astral influences, with money and possessions as well as the position enjoying expansion, promotion and general good fortune. However there may be stubborn obstacles as well as subtlety and trickery to handle shrewdly and with acumen. It is propitious for making new deals of magnitude. Romance and friendship, with festive celebrations, are quite in the picture, but take pains not to overdo or be carried to any forms of excess or extremes, in either business or social functions.
If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of happiness, expansion, promotion and good luck, with possible inheritance or gifts of substantial quality. It should be a time for closing deals and aiming at high goals and ambitions, despite impediments or tenacious situations. These should be handled with sagacity, alertness and clever manipulations of fraud or treachery. Romantic celebrations, courtships, marriages may be in order, but call for moderation and good judgment lest excess or reckless behaviour beget serious regrets.

Nettie Sullivan Conducts Local Program

More than 160 members and visitors enjoyed the fine inspection meeting of Circleville chapter No. 90, Order of the Eastern Star, Tuesday, in Masonic temple, with Nettie M. Sullivan, of Lima, worthy grand matron, serving as inspecting officer. Other distinguished visitors were Roberta K. Mindling, associate grand matron; Gwladus K. Thomas, of Niles, past grand matron; Marie L. Hamilton, Circleville, past grand matron; and grand representatives, Ruth Carrott of Montpelier, representing Illinois; Gladys Jones, of Oak Hill, representing Nebraska; and Ruth Burton, of Portsmouth, representing Washington; Marvel A. Whitmer of Columbus, grand marshal, and Lucille Milner, of Tippecanoe City, associate grand conductress.

Mrs. George Valentine, worthy matron, and Carl D. Bennett, worthy patron, received the visitors. Officers of the chapter exemplified the work and were highly complimented on their efficiency by the worthy grand matron. The distinguished visitors were welcomed and escorted to East, as were other elected and appointed officers, visiting worthy matrons and patrons, and past worthy matrons and patrons of the Circleville chapter.

Tall vases of flowers and altar candelabra were used in decorations in East, and baskets of lovely summer blossoms were placed throughout the room.

Included in the program was group singing of "God Bless America," the "Star-Spangled Banner" and also a tribute to the Flag. At 10 p. m. the worthy grand matron offered prayer and addresses were made by other grand officers.

At the close of the excellent work of the chapter, the guests were invited to the red room where a salad course was served from a lace-covered table, centered with an arrangement of American pillar roses.

Refreshments were arranged and served by Mrs. George H. Adkins, Mrs. O. C. King, Mrs. Irene Mullins, Mrs. L. E. Foreman, Mrs. Hazel Rader, Mrs. N. E. Reichelderfer, Mrs. Sam Morris, Mrs. Virgil Cress, Mrs. Irene Newton, Mrs. Robert Denman, Mrs. Charles Smith and Mrs. A. J. Lyle.

Registrations were made by Mrs. T. R. Acord, Mrs. Ella Hornbeck, Mrs. C. E. Mahaffey and Mrs. Mary Spangler. Members of the courtesy committee included Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, Mrs. C. D. Bennett, Mrs. E. S. Shane, C. E. Mahaffey, Earl Hilyard and George Welker. The lovely decorations were placed by Mrs. George Welker, Mrs. Fred Moeller, Mrs. Earl Price and Miss Reba Lee.

Preceding the inspection meeting, the visiting officers were entertained at dinner at the Pickaway Country club.

Have a Coca-Cola = Come on over

...or keeping youth happy at home

Keeping young folks happy at home is mostly a matter of having a house in which they and their friends feel welcome. So don't forget Coca-Cola... it's always a big attraction for the young crowd. It says better than words, Come on over to our house... we're glad to see you. Be sure there's "Coke" in your icebox. There's no more cordial invitation, nor one more refreshing, than the three simple words... Have a "Coke".

PIN-WORMS Now can be Beaten!

The miseries of Pin-Worms have been known for centuries, and many doctors have sought a way to deal with this dreadful pest that lives and grows inside the human body. Today, thanks to an important scientific discovery, a new and highly effective treatment is being hailed by medical authorities. It is based on a remarkable drug known as gentian violet. This drug is the vital element in P-W, the new Pin-Worm tablet developed by the laboratories of Dr. D. Jayne & Son, America's leading specialists in worm medicines. P-W makes it unnecessary for you or your child to suffer in silence with the embarrassing rectal itch caused by Pin-Worms, or to take chances on the real distress they often create. The small, easy-to-take P-W tablets act in a special way to destroy Pin-Worms. So watch for possible warning signs such as itching seat and nose, uneasy stomach, bed-wetting, nervous fidgeting. If you suspect Pin-Worms, ask your druggist for a package of P-W and follow the simple directions carefully. It is easy to remember: P-W for Pin-Worms!

HOUSEHOLD HINTS
It is a good idea to keep some blotters on hand, and when any liquid is spilled on a rug blot it up. If any remains dilute it with a little clear water and blot it up again. This is a safer procedure than rubbing with a cloth which can spread the liquid.

For correct lighting, direct the light rays in accordance with the hand that you use. If you are right-handed, it is important that the light be placed at your left. Place it in the opposite position if you are left-handed.

If you have a damaged place on the tablecloth, make it a decorative spot by hemming or slip-stitching a motif cut from a piece of lace over it.

MISS MARY LOU KOCHHEISER BECOMES BRIDE

In a quiet home wedding Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. Miss Mary Lou Kochheiser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kochheiser of 151 West Franklin street, became the bride of Eric W. Peters, seaman 1/c, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Walter Peters of Montgomery, near Cincinnati. The Rev. Mr. Peters read the nuptial service for his son and bride.

Vows were exchanged before mantle in the living room, the altar being banked with ferns and flowers.

A beautiful gown of white lace and marquiset was chosen by the bride for her wedding, her fingertip veil falling from a lace cap. She carried an arm bouquet of white carnations.

Miss Viola Berger of Ashville, a class-mate of the bride in the Christ hospital school of nursing, Cincinnati, served as her maid of honor. She was gowned in blue organdie and carried pink carnations.

Staff Sergeant Henry Horton, of the U. S. Army Air Base, Lockbourne, served as best man for the bridegroom.

An informal reception for a few close friends at the wedding was held immediately after the ceremony. Out-of-town guests were the Rev. and Mrs. Peters of Montgomery and their daughter, Ann, of Baltimore, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Berger, of Ashville. Candles in crystal holders decorated the bride's table that was centered with a beautifully decorated wedding cake. The cake was served with punch.

When the Mr. and Mrs. Peters left for a short wedding trip, the bride was wearing a blue linen princess frock with white accessories.

The former Miss Kochheiser is a graduate of Circleville high school and is attending Christ hospital school of nursing in Cincinnati. The bridegroom is a graduate of a Cincinnati high school and of Wooster College, Wooster, where he majored in mathematics. He is a seaman 1/c in the U. S. Navy and is stationed at Port Hueneme, Cal. After a brief trip, Mr. Peters and his bride will visit his parents at their home in Montgomery until the end of his leave.

Have a Coca-Cola = Come on over

... or keeping youth happy at home

Keeping young folks happy at home is mostly a matter of having a house in which they and their friends feel welcome. So don't forget Coca-Cola... it's always a big attraction for the young crowd. It says better than words, Come on over to our house... we're glad to see you. Be sure there's "Coke" in your icebox. There's no more cordial invitation, nor one more refreshing, than the three simple words... Have a "Coke".

CARRIES OWN ALARM

NEW YORK—Investigating a report that a burglar alarm was ringing, police sped down Fifth Avenue in the early dawn and found a smashed window in a combination barber and jewelry repair shop. The alarm, however, was coming from down the street, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other. Finally, the policeman found 23-year-old William Boucher, and fished from his pockets a quantity of trinkets, including an alarm clock. In the line-up, later, the prisoner was asked if he didn't hear any noise. "What noise?" queried Boucher, adding that he had been drinking.

CARRIES OWN ALARM
 NEW YORK—Investigating a report that a burglar alarm was ringing, police sped down Fifth Avenue in the early dawn and found a smashed window in a combination barber and jewelry-repair shop. The alarm, however, was coming from down the street, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other. Finally, the policeman found 23-year-old William Boucher, and fished from his pockets a quantity of trinkets, including an alarm clock. In the line-up, later, the prisoner was asked if he didn't hear any noise. "What noise?" queried Boucher, adding that he had been drinking.

BIG CHARITY TAKE
 CHICAGO, June 7—Col. Matt J. Winn, executive director of Lincoln fields which is holding its meeting at the Hawthorne track, announced today that $104,657.12 was realized for war charities at the Memorial Day program. Two thirds of the amount will go to the Red Cross and one third to the Chicago service men's centers.

A white leather chair cover that is slightly stained may be cleaned and then a good grade of white shoe polish, the type that will not rub off, may be used on it. If it is rather badly stained, it may be cleaned and given a coat of top quality enamel, used as it comes from the can.

CHARLEY PARKER, SET TO MAKE BIG TIME BID

Texas Youth Greatest School Boy Runner Since Days Of Jesse Owens

NEW YORK, June 7—The greatest school boy runner since the hey-day of Jesse Owens—and possibly the best ever—will be unveiled during the National A. A. U. track and field championships in New York June 17-18. He is Charley Parker, of San Antonio, Tex., who was slated to make his bid on the big time last year, when, just two weeks before the nationals, he was stricken with appendicitis.

Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., a man generally known as Mr. Track and Field, firmly believes that the tall and gangly young Texan stands a chance of wiping out all the dash marks ever written into the books. Clyde Littlefield, University of Texas track and field coach, agrees with Ferris, or, in fact, gave Ferris the idea in the first place by pointing out what Parker has done in Southwestern meets.

The marks that Parker will shoot at here are the 100 meters and the 200 meters. Owens holds the world standards of 10.2 and 20.3. In fact, as a schoolboy the 17-year-old Parker already has bettered Owens' best school boy performance for the 220 yards, which he negotiated in 20.6.

He is quite definitely the outstanding individual currently in the track and field business and a serious-minded youngster, according to Ferris, who thinks Parker is likely to prove a sensation in the national championships. He is going to run in both the senior and the junior events.

Parker has run in 14 races this season and set nine new records of one kind and another besides tying two others. He is undefeated since 1941. He has won 49 dashes without a defeat, exclusive of trial heats in which he also has always been the victor.

Aside from his running, the new meteor in track and field is an A-1 student and president of the Jefferson High School Student Council at San Antonio. He tried to fit himself into V-5 or V-12 programs, but was rejected because of color blindness. He still expects to get into the Army one way or another, then after the war will study law at the University of Texas.

Parker is 5 feet 9 1/2 inches tall and weighs 145 pounds. He has a long stride and what coaches call absolutely flawless natural form. They figure he is a cinch to break the longer dash records and at least a potential shatterer of the shorter dash marks.

"This young fellow really looks like the greatest thing that has come along in years," Ferris said today, "and it will be interesting to watch him go in our nationals after all this time since there has been a sprinter of such class around."

23 SCHOOLS TO PARTICIPATE IN MARQUETTE TILT

MILWAUKEE, June 7—The entry list for the National Collegiate Track meet at Marquette university Saturday was swelled today to 23 universities and colleges, including eight Western Conference schools.

The Eastern list is headed by New York university and Boston college. Fresno State will represent the West coast. Most of the other entries outside the Western Conference will come from the Big Six and the Rocky Mountain Conference.

IKE WILLIAMS FAVORED TO WHIP SAMMY ANGOTT

PHILADELPHIA, June 7—Ike Williams, of Trenton, N. J., ruled a two-to-one favorite today to whip former lightweight champion Sammy Angott, of Washington, Pa., in their delayed 10-round bout tonight at Shibe park in Philadelphia.

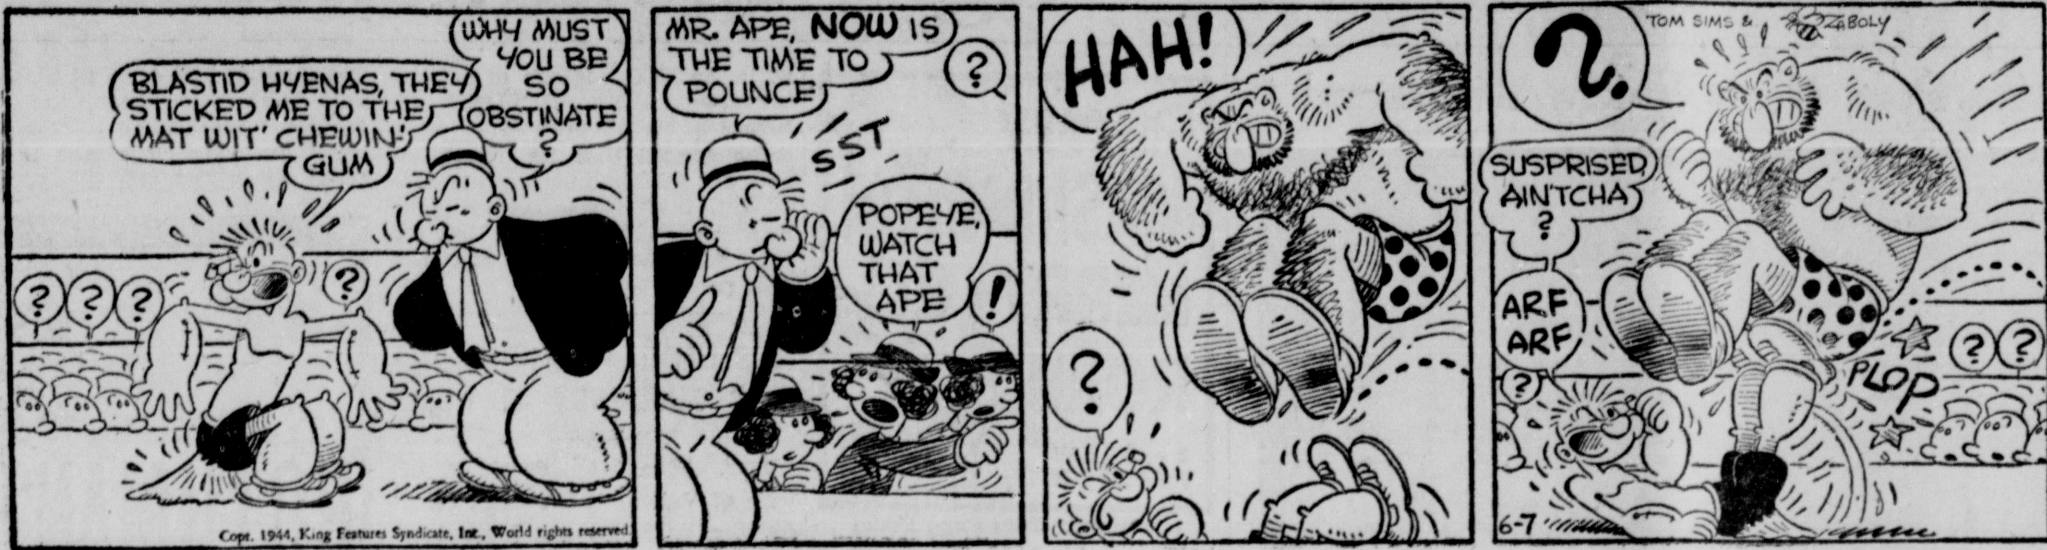

The match, originally scheduled for last night, was postponed until tonight by Promoter Herman Taylor because of the Allied invasion of Europe.

Angott, 29, weighed in at 139 1/4 yesterday to the 20-year-old Williams' 135. However, the pair will mount the scales again today.

LATINIZES BRAHMS

Xavier Cugat, who has been turning his attention to the classics, featuring Latin-American treatments of the masters, gives the south-of-the-border treatment to Brahms' "Lullaby," as a highlight June 14. He'll also play one of the first songs to focus the American public's attention on the rumba, "Peanut Vendor." Del Campo sings "Prisionera Del Mar," while Nita Rosa's solo is "Clavelitos" and Don Rodney sings "Time Waits for No One." Other orchestral selections include "La Rosita," "Joropa" and "Society Congo."

POTENT COMEDY TEAM

Cass Daley and Bob Burns, who proved themselves a potent comedy team when Miss Daley made a series of guest appearances on Burns' "Arkansas Traveler" show, go visiting as a team, when they appear on the "All Time Hit Parade," Friday. Bob and Cass will clown together and try out the program's music game, "Name the Song Before the Gong." Miss Daley, film comedienne who has set a record for guest appearances this broadcasting season, made her first "one time" guest appearance with Burns on his Thursday night program several weeks ago. June 1, she had ticked off her seventh consecutive repeat guest appearance with the bawzy king, and was still going strong.

BAMPTON TO STAR

Metropolitan opera soprano Rose Bampton, who will star in a Summer series with Wilfred Pelletier and his orchestra, replacing "Information Please" Mondays, beginning July 17, has been selected to be the first guest singer on the "Voice" Summer series starting June 12. Booked for later in the season are Igor Gorin, Eleanor Steber and similar representative names of opera and concert.

BRIEF RADIO NOTES

The one and only Jimmy Durante has been added to the long list of stars who will be heard over the four networks in the first broadcast starting the Fifth War Loan Drive, coming from Texarkana June 12. Orson Welles is scripting the special airing.

Dinah Shore, who has been given more titles by the boys overseas than she can remember, has another this week. A battery of field artillery boys have asked her to be their "foxhole com-

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

LEARN BRIDGE FAST

15—Choice of Openings

YOUR HAND may contain the requirements for any of several different opening bids, and you must choose between them. Most frequent among these is a two-suiter, one containing two biddable suits. The accepted practice with these, if your hand is fairly strong, is to bid the longer suit first. Your partner will infer later, when he hears the other suit, that the first is at least as long as the other, probably longer. That will guide him in showing his preference for them.

If the suits are of equal length, the natural procedure is to bid the higher ranking one first. That is not so much for the purpose of showing it first, as for enabling you to show the lower one second. Take a hand containing two five-card suits, in spades and hearts. If you bid hearts on your next turn, your partner can show heart preference by passing and spade preference by merely shifting from hearts to spades without raising the contract. If you had bid the hearts first, and then the spades at the level of two, he could favor spades by passing, but would have to lift the bid to three to show heart preference.

If one suit is two cards longer than the other, such as a six-card suit and a four-card suit, it is often well to bid the longer one twice before showing the shorter one. When a hand contains three biddable suits, if one is of five cards, that usually is the best to show first. If they are three suits of four cards each, then the suit just below the singleton usually is the best to start with, as your partner is more likely to answer with that than any other, since more cards of it are out.

Some hands contain a choice between suit and No Trump. In these cases, if there is any suit which is not stopped, the suit bid is almost always the better selection. But if every suit is stopped, and especially if there are three cards in all side suits, with one of them containing a guarded king or twice-guarded queen, the No Trump will often pan out best.

When your hand justifies an opening bid of two, to proclaim game strength, that is nearly always the best call, especially if your strength is mainly in one or both major suits. Since it requires only ten tricks to make game in them, and 11 in a minor suit.

There are times when the "principle of preparedness" makes it advisable to violate these rules. It applies especially when your hand is barely strong enough for an opening bid, and you fear your partner may get too high. Then you wish to find the right declaration at the lowest possible level. In such cases, if you have more than one suit to bid, favor the one which will make your partner's response easiest or your own next bid easiest.

If your suits are adjoining, such as spades and hearts, hearts and diamonds or diamonds and clubs, the higher should generally be bid first in such a hand, even if the lower is longer. If they are not adjoining, the one just below your shortest suit makes it easier usually. Sometimes it will even pay you to bid a three-card minor suit, more often clubs than diamonds. Figuring out your partner's most likely responses and what you will do about them will guide you in this problem.

Tomorrow: Response to Partner

panion in spirit," because they think they're going to spend considerable time in foxholes and they want them to seem more like home!

When John Winchell, friendly "Old Timer" of the "Musical Steelmakers," isn't doing his job as auditor for the sponsoring company or taking part in rehearsals for each Sunday broadcast or looking after his Victory garden—the canny old Scotchman is to be found on one of Wheeling's golf courses playing his favorite game. Winchell, though 64 years old, may be one of the contenders for the West Virginia 1944 championship!

A character by any other name is hardly as colorful as those on "Mr. and Mrs. North," the NBC spine-tingler. In the chiller-diller scripts are such out of the way names as these: Euphemia Lattin, Mahatma McGonigal, Murgatroyd the Third and, on the latest North whodunit, Tailgate O'Toole.

William Spier, bewhiskered producer of the "Suspense" series, has set to work on his first film production job for MGM—a dramatic story filled with—"Suspense."

Donna Reed, one of the prettiest and most promising screen newcomers, has been signed to guest star on the "Silver Theatre" CBS drama program on Sunday, July 2.

15—Choice of Openings
YOUR HAND may contain the requirements for any of several different opening bids, and you must choose between them. Most frequent among these is a two-suiter, one containing two bid-dable suits. The accepted practice with these, if your hand is fairly strong, is to bid the longer suit first. Your partner will infer later, when he hears the other suit, that the first is at least as long as the other, probably longer. That will guide him in showing his preference for them.

If the suits are of equal length, the natural procedure is to bid the higher ranking one first. That is not so much for the purpose of showing it first, as for enabling you to show the lower one second. Take a hand containing two five-card suits, in spades and hearts. If you bid spades first, then when you bid hearts on your next turn, your partner can show heart preference by passing and spade preference by merely shifting from hearts to spades without raising the contract. If you had bid the hearts first, and then the spades at the level of two, he could favor spades by passing, but would have to lift the bid to three to show heart preference.

If one suit is two cards longer than the other, such as a six-card suit and a four-card suit, it is often well to bid the longer one twice before showing the shorter one.

When a hand contains three bid-dable suits, if one is of five cards, that usually is the best to show first. If they are three suits of four cards each, then the suit just below the singleton usually is the best to start with, as your partner is more likely to answer with that than any other, since more cards of it are out.

Some hands contain a choice between suit and No Trump. In these cases, if there is any suit which is not stopped, the suit bid is almost always the better selection. But if every suit is stopped, and especially if there are three cards in all side suits, with one of them containing a guarded king or twice-guarded queen, the No Trump will often pan out best.

When your hand justifies an opening bid of two, to proclaim game strength, that is nearly always the best call, especially if your strength is mainly in one or both major suits. Since it requires only ten tricks to make game in them and 11 in a minor suit.

There are times when the "principle of preparedness" makes it advisable to violate these rules. It applies especially when your hand is barely strong enough for an opening bid, and you fear your partner may get too high. Then you wish to find the right declaration at the lowest possible level. In such cases, if you have more than one suit to bid, favor the one which will make your partner's response easiest or your own next bid easiest.

If your suits are adjoining, such as spades and hearts, hearts and diamonds or diamonds and clubs, the higher should generally be bid first in such a hand, even if it is lower in ranking. If they are not adjoining, the one just below your shortest suit makes it easier usually. Sometimes it will even pay you to bid a three-card minor suit, more often clubs than diamonds. Figuring out your partner's most likely responses and what you will do about them will guide you in this problem.

Howard Moore And Ruth Blum Win Awards Of Kiwanis Club

Circleville high school's eighty-sixth annual commencement exercises were held at the high school Tuesday evening with 73 boys and girls receiving diplomas. The Rev. Philip Auer, pastor of the Peace Lutheran church of Galion, and vice president of Kiwanis International, as speaker, discussed "The Marching Feet of Men."

The Rev. Mr. Auer urged the graduates to go forth with firm determination to live uprightly, to live to serve, to put the welfare of the world before self-seeking, to realize that giving, not getting, is the primary object of life. He told the group that satisfied hearts and consciences would sustain and uphold them as they went to meet many unpleasant things for which they were not responsible. "Faith in God" he declared to be the only thing to hold them steadfast in the struggle of life.

Outstanding Pupils
Kiwanis club achievement awards were presented Howard B. Moore and Ruth Esther Blum as the outstanding boy and girl of the class. These awards, announced for the first time at the commencement exercises, are for scholarship and participation in school activities for the four years of high school work.

Frank Fischer, superintendent of Circleville schools, spoke briefly in opening the exercises, telling of the sadness of the occasion, changed because of the thoughts of all were on the Allied invasion of Europe, the only bright thing being that the members of the class were still safely present.

John Boggs led the audience and class in the "Salute to the Flag." Accompanied by the high school orchestra, the capacity audience joined in singing the "Star-Spangled Banner."

Guests Welcomed
Monna Lee Hanley as salutatorian welcomed the parents and friends in her talk on the topic, "A Measure to be Filled."

Carolyn Herrmann, class valedictorian, was impressive in her splendid talk, "A Tide in the Affairs of Men." Both Miss Hanley and Miss Herrmann received scholarships to Capital university, Columbus, for their outstanding record of work during their four years of high school.

Ruth Esther Blum and Anna Ruth Defenbaugh played "Serenata" by Moszkowski as a two piano number and Miss Blum and Patsy Winks, "Holiday" by Ethel Ponce. These fine performances were delightful features of the program.

Sing Lord's Prayer
The senior class, directed by the Rev. Carl Kennedy, sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Stout-Hearted Men." Elizabeth Downing played the piano accompaniments. The high school orchestra, augmented by several former members, played "The Scarlet Mask" by Zamecnik, and "Huldung's" by Grieg, under direction of C. F. Zaenglein.

J. Wray Henry, principal of the high school, presented the scholarship awards and the awards of the Kiwanis club after a splendid talk in which he told of the outstanding achievements of the class as a whole. He reviewed the work of the class in relation to the war, in the scrap drive, the Red Cross drive and in work for the War Chest and mentioned that the new landscaping at the high school building was a project of this group. He presented the class to the board of education, represented by Mrs. Howard B. Moore, vice president, who gave the class members their diplomas. The class song, the words by Doris Weaver and the music by Miss Blum, was sung under direction of the Rev. Mr. Kennedy, who also led the audience in the closing selection, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." The Rev. Mr. Kennedy voiced both the invocation and the benediction.

Service Men Recognized
In addition to the seniors present, diplomas were awarded Raymond Haley, son of George Haley, Watt street, now serving with an M. P. detachment at Camp Sutton, S. C.; Meredith Richards,

Later, OWI got a phone call from columnist O'Donnell. Reaching Assistant Director George Barnes, O'Donnell sputtered:

"Why didn't you call me about this when it happened? I represent the paper with the biggest circulation in the world (N. Y. Daily News). Why didn't you get in touch with me? I want to know OWI's answer."

"If we corrected all of your errors, John, we wouldn't have time to do anything else," replied Barnes.

"Furthermore, you have probably printed more mis-statements about OWI than anyone else in Washington, and this is the first time you have ever called OWI, to my knowledge, to check your facts."

"Will you put that in writing?" stormed O'Donnell.

"Yes, if you will ask me in writing," replied Barnes.

So far, O'Donnell has not asked in writing for the statement.

TOO MANY HEADACHES

NEW YORK — Supplies of acetylsalicylic acid, antipyrine, phenacetin and salicyrine have become so scarce in Denmark that Nazi authorities have been forced to limit their sales to a prescription basis, according to the German-controlled Danish radio. The broadcast, heard by U. S. monitors, said that none of these products, which were used "mainly for headache powder," could be sold more than five times on each prescription.

ALL IS FORGIVEN

PITTSBURGH — A recruiting drive to enlist retired nurses in vital homefront service has invaded the so-called "Agnony Column" of the newspapers. Along with such notices as "C. H.—Please come home. All is forgiven" in the personals section of Pittsburgh classified columns appeared this ad: "Missing—The graduate nurse who is not contributing to the war effort! Call the Nursing Council."

mittee, where Congressmen asked Elmer Davis about it. He then prepared a carefully documented answer to O'Donnell's criticisms.

Later, OWI got a phone call from columnist O'Donnell. Reaching Assistant Director George Barnes, O'Donnell sputtered:

"Why didn't you call me about this when it happened? I represent the paper with the biggest circulation in the world (N. Y. Daily News). Why didn't you get in touch with me? I want to know OWI's answer."

"If we corrected all of your errors, John, we wouldn't have time to do anything else," replied Barnes. "Furthermore, you have probably printed more mis-statements about OWI than anyone else in Washington, and this is the first time you have ever called OWI to my knowledge, to check your facts."

"Will you put that in writing?" stormed O'Donnell.

"Yes, if you will ask me in writing," replied Barnes.

So far, O'Donnell has not asked in writing for the statement.

RADIO STATION DEBUNK

A new high in Axis gall was revealed the other day by Dr. Robert D. Leigh, head of the Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service of the Federal Communications Commission. Radio station DEBUNK has been definitely located in Germany, although its announcers mischievously claim to be broadcasting from here. It specializes in daily propaganda programs for mid-Westerners.

Dr. Leigh reported that his FBIS was monitoring the station one night and picked up the following announcement: "Before we continue the program tonight, we would like to inform you that the Federal Communications Commission has renewed our license and given us a new wave-length, commencing June 15."

A short time later, the station went off the air temporarily, declaring that it was in difficulty with the FCC because of a news broadcast. When DEBUNK returned to the air after a few days, it announced that its difficulties with the FCC had been straightened out, that it was operating on FCC license No. 382, and that the FCC had awarded the station a gold medal.
